Gov't to Wait-See As Ferry Links Cut

The British Columbia government today adopted a wait-and-see attitude as B.C. Ferries was shut down by a walkout of deck, catering and shore workers.

No negotiating meetings are scheduled with either the 2,000 unlicensed employees or the 400 licensed employees until at least Monday afternoon, said Transport Minister Robert Strachan.

Asked this morning what plans he has to deal with the walkout, Strachan said: "I'm going to examine the situation and determine what course of action will be taken."

He said no special cabinet meetings have been scheduled for today or this weekend. He had reported to Premier Barrett who "regretted it very much."

All ferry services between Vancouver Island and the Canadian mainland were halted by the B.C. ferries' strike and two smaller walkouts.

For the first time since July, 1958, no freight or passenger ferries were running between the Island and Vancouver area.

Struck are:

—B.C. Ferries by members of the marine branch (unlicensed) of the B.C. Government Employees' Union. Issues include wages, wage adjustments and payment for statutory holiday work;

—Canadian Pacific Princess of Vancouver service between Nanaimo and Vancouver and Carrier Princess service between Swartz Bay and Vancouver, part of the 24-hour regional rotating strike against railways by B.C. non-operating employees — those who don't drive main-line locomotives or repair rolling stock. Issues are all terms for a new contract, but particularly wages and pensions;

—Aqua Transportation, a subsidiary of Seaspan International, by Local 400 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers. The company's Greg Yorke vessel hauls Canadian National rail cars to Victoria.

Thousands of tourists and others streamed to the Swartz Bay and Departure Bay terminals Thursday forming line-ups eight hours long trying to get off the Island before the expected strike.

Three extra sailings were laid on at Swartz Bay and all waiting traffic was cleared. But no extra sailings were arranged at Departure Bay, near Nanaimo, and 300 vehi*cles were left behind.*

Today's strike against B.C. Ferries is the first since the government-owned fleet was shut for 14 days in February, 1968.

IT'S CHAOS ON WHARF

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Mainland-bound ferry passengers straggled off the Island today after 24-hour waits at as many as three different ferry terminals.

Spirits were still high, however, as books and playing cards were pulled out of car trunks to keep children and parents from becoming testy.

Tourists started their wait for passage on the Coho to Port Angeles and CPR's Princess Marguerite about 5 p.m. Thursday when the Swartz Bay situation was described as hopeless.

Roads leading to both Inner Harbor terminals were jammed with cars, and tourists hoped they were in the right line-up. Some described the situation as "chaotic."

But Victoria police had them sorted out about 5 a.m. and tired visitors were directed into neat lines along Wharf Street, in a supermarket parking lot at Esquimalt and Songhees and along Tyee Road.

Motel owners, disappointed at the mass exodus responding to the strike-bound B.C. Ferries, were granted one night's reprieve Thursday as

Greenpeace Man Beaten By French

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The Canadian protest yacht Greenpeace was boarded in interna*tional waters this week and* its crew beaten by French sailors, according to Dr. Andrew McTaggart, brother of the boat's skipper David McTaggart who is in hospital in Papeete as a result of injuries received.

Reporting on a phone conversation with his brother, McTaggart said:

"Dave was in international waters watching the balloon (signalling the imminent commencement of the nuclear test) go up, when he was boarded by the French military and beaten.

"He sustained internal injuries and an eye injury and he doesn't know what's happened to the boat or the other members of the crew."

McTaggart said he neglected to ask his brother the precise date of the incident, but he gathered it must have occurred Monday or Tuesday within 20 miles of Mururoa.

The boat, sources in Tahiti said, was towed to Mururoa Lagoon where it will remain during the French nuclear tests now expected by the end of the week.

He was injured, according to a French spokesman, when he slipped on the deck of either the Greenpeace or the French naval vessel La Dunkirk Quoise during "a tussle."

The three other crewmen of Greenpeace were taken to a military airbase at Hoa Island.

An external affairs department spokesman said in Ottawa the incident first was drawn to the attention of the Canadian government Thurs*day when an embassy official* in Paris was called to the French foreign ministry.

He apparently was told that the Canadian yacht was spotted inside the security zone that France had declared around the atoll at which the tests are being conducted.

WEAVING HORSECART WAS DRIVER

DURHAM, England (UPI) — The horsecart that junk dealer Michael Archbold was driving was weaving down the road, and police said drink was involved.

Archbold agreed, but said it wasn't him — it was the horse.

But magistrates fined him $12.50 Thursday under a 1,000-year-old law and said Archbold had had a few too many — whatever the condition of his horse.

After the court session, Archbold owned up.

"Sparkie never touched a drop," he said. "I know it was a pretty bad excuse saying the horse was drunk and not me, but I'd had a few pints and it was all I could think of at the time."

2-Cent Gas Hike

Petroleum companies in B.C. this week began increasing gasoline and furnace oil prices from 1.5 cents to 2 cents per gallon.

Gulf Oil, Shell Canada, and Standard of British Columbia have increased their prices, while other companies say they are studying the market.

All companies are faced with higher costs because they are paying 1.14 cents more per gallon for the crude oil they buy.

Shell increased gasoline prices 2 cents per gallon and furnace oil by half a cent. The company has stopped free furnace servicing to enable them to hold down the furnace oil price.

In fact, the Gulf increases worked out to 1.6 cents in some instances, where franchise dealers increased prices from 53.9 regular to 55.5. Premium gasolines are exactly five cents per gallon higher.

Prices vary greatly across Victoria but prices for regular were from 55.5 to 56.9 in franchise stations that had increased their prices.

Large gas supermarkets, operated directly by petroleum companies, were selling gasoline from one to two cents per gallon cheaper.

Department stores and self-serve and discount stations were even lower, although their prices were also going up.

Strike Alert

SANTIAGO (UPI) — Chile's airline pilots, physicians and retailers went on a "strike alert" today that threatened to turn the 23-day-old nationwide truckers walkout into a general strike.

RAIL UNIONS STRIKE B.C.

Times News Services

The latest of a series of rotating strikes hampering the railways moved into B.C. today with non-operating rail employees declaring they would take a tougher stand this time round.

B.C. workers, who walked out at 6 a.m. for a 24-hour strike together with union members in Alberta and the Yukon said picket lines would be "rigid" at the port of Vancouver and at other locations.

Marshall Hill, chairman of the union's B.C. joint strike committee, said the pickets would not allow any trade union members through their lines, including longshoremen needed to load grain.

The shutdown to rail ser*vices in western and northern* Canada marked the beginning of the fourth week of rotating strike action by the non-ops.

Also affected in B.C. are the CP ferry princesses, Vancouver and Carrier which will be tied up 24 hours.

An additional 18,000 Ontario rail workers east of Thunder Bay are expected to return to work at midnight tonight. Another 8,000 ended a three-day walkout Thursday afternoon in the Atlantic provinces.

Meanwhile union leaders of the 56,000 non-operating railway employees held a secret meeting with Labor Minister John Munro in Ottawa Thursday night.

A union spokesman said union leaders were in caucus and might meet later today with Judge Alan Gold, federal mediator in the dispute which has resulted in regional strike action against 11 railways since July 26.

U.S. Economy in Slump

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. economy cooled dramatically between April and June while prices rose at the highest rate in 22 years, the government said today.

In a revised report on the Gross National Product (GNP), the commerce department said the economy expanded at an annual rate of 2.4 per cent in the second quarter compared to 8.7 per cent in January-March.

The 2.4 per cent second quarter "real" growth rate (economic expansion minus the effects of inflation) was the smallest of any quarter since the recessionary 4.8 per cent decline in the last three months of 1970.

On the price side, the inflation rate was 7.3 per cent in the same period, up from a 6.1 per cent surge between January and March.

The second quarter inflationary surge was the biggest since a 13 per cent jump in the first quarter of 1951, when the buildup for the Korean War pushed inflation to record high.

In dollar terms, second quarter GNP rose $29.5 billion compared to $43.3 billion in the three previous months to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $1.3 trillion.

In another report, the commerce department said before-tax corporate profits in the second quarter rose $10.5 billion, compared to $13.5 billion in the January-March period. As of the end of June, pretax book profits were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $130.1 billion.

Hospitals to End Sex Discrimination

Agreement has been reached between the Hospital Employees' Union and the provincial health department "to wipe out all sex discrimi*nation in* B.C. hospitals" by Jan. 1, 1976.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said the agreement provides an immediate wage increase of $37.50 per month, retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year, for all affected categories.

A timetable for bringing male and female rates of pay for similar jobs to the same level will be negotiated between the union and the B.C. Hospital Association. The agreement stipulates that this must be done by the start of 1976.

The Hospital Employees' Union has also agreed to stop processing cases of sex discrimination through its grievance procedures in the various hospitals.

The agreement also calls for provision of a job evaluation program, applying to new job descriptions and new training programs.

Cocke expressed his appreciation to Kathleen Ruff, director of the B.C. Human Rights Act "for the service she has rendered to women working in our hospitals."

He also praised the union, which he said "sacrificed some short-term gain to accomplish a great deal more important objective for a great many more people."

The only remaining ferry services off the Island are Washington State Ferries, Sidney to Anacortes; Black Ball, Victoria to Port Angeles; and Canadian Pacific's Princess Marguerite Victoria to Seattle. There was a heavy demand on all three companies.

Washington state today added a third run to the Washington State Ferries service between Sidney and Anacortes until further notice.

The super-ferry Walla Walla, which handles 2,000 passengers and 206 cars, will leave Anacortes at midnight and leave Sidney at 3 a.m.

Major airlines flying between the mainland and Victoria are booked until Tuesday and no extra flights are planned.

Spokesmen for Pacific Western Airlines and Air Canada said today they were swamped with requests for extra flights. Passengers have been advised to stay home or to come to the airport and take their chances on no-shows in emergency situations.

PWA add two extra flights today and both had been filled before 10 a.m. today.

Air West, flying from Victoria's Inner Harbor to downtown Vancouver is also booked until Tuesday but an air-bus system will operate on a first-come-first-serve basis all day Saturday.

"We don't have spare equipment knocking around," said a Vancouver PWA spokesman, "and we're not anticipating any additional flights at the present time."

"We're sort of reviewing the demand on an hour-to-hour basis," he said, adding there's "not too much we can do."

The current Canadian Pacific mechanics' strike and the CP rail strike have added to the shortage of aircraft and crews, said the spokesman.

Food supplies in Victoria will not be immediately or seriously affeetd by B.C. Ferry workers strike.

Retail and wholesale suppliers in the city said today most produce is transported by CPR carrier ferries and the B.C. Ferry strike is just "one more hassle" to add to the series on rotating CPR and CN rail strikes.

While Safeway stores normally use B.C. Ferries a great deal, a company spokesman said today the strike will cause no crisis.

Essentials such as bread, milk and eggs can be supplied from the Island he said, and Safeway recieves much of its produce from the United States.

"We got all our truckloads back from Vancouver last night," the spokesman said, "and we're getting ready to start getting those essentials locally."

Certan products, he admits however, will start disappearing from the shelves if the strike continues next week.

Woodward's food department uses the CPR carrier ferry almost exclusively and forecasts no major problems despite the troubles caused by the 24-hour rotating strike which hit the CPR ferry today.

Many of the food suppliers have been dealing with strike problems for several weeks as the rotating CPR and CN rail strikes back up freight cars across Canada.

"I've got four or five rail cars held up on their way from the prairies now," said a spokesman for a large wholesale company.

"With the B.C. Ferries out as well," he said, "it will just cause more delays on the CPR ferry."

Another major food wholesaler said his warehouse normally stocks less than four weeks' supplies. Those stocks have already been cut into by the rail strikes and if the B.C. Ferries stay on strike some products will no longer be available.

Feed grain suppliers said today they are also more affected by the CPR strikes and some report they are already behind on their feed orders.

One spokesman for a local firm said he usually brings his hay supplies by B.C. Ferries and his customers will not have their orders filled.

"It's going to affect a lot of people," he said.

Other feed stores said as long as the CPR carrier ferry goes back in service they can continue supplying feed although other merchandise will be affected by the B.C. Ferry strike.

The last total shutdown of Island-Canadian mainland ferry services in 1958 lasted four days. During the 14-day strike by B.C. Ferries in 1968, CPR service continued between Nanaimo and Vancouver.

The unlicensed staff of B.C. Ferries met early this morning after negotiations Thursday afternoon and evening with Transport Minister Robert Strachan failed to resolve the issues.

Between 92 and 93 per cent of the employees voted to stop work, said Norman Thornber, business agent for the marine branch (unlicensed) of the BCGEU.

Swartz Bay workers voted 94 per cent in favor, while Departure Bay was 100 per cent in favor. A joint meeting of unlicensed staff at Horseshoe Bay and Tsawwassen terminals and the Deas Dock saw only 23 of more than 700 oppose a work stoppage.

The licensed personnel 400 deck officers and enneers, members of a separate marine branch of the BCGEU — will hold meetings tonight to decide what they want to do.

Strachan today attributed the major problem in the breakdown of negotiations to an internal split between the two groups of ferry employees.

He said the decision of the unlicensed employees to bargain separately from the licensed employees resulted in an impossible bargaining situation for the government.

"This division among the ferry employees is one of the factors that have made a settlement almost impossible," he said.

But he was happy to hear the two groups now are willing to bargain jointly again.

In Kelowna Liberal leader David Anderson today urged the NDP government to intervene in the B.C. Ferries dispute and order ferries personnel back to work before a "critical" situation develops.

He also said Premier Barrett should replace Transport Minister Strachan because Strachan had handled the negotiations incompetently.

Speaking as one of the two Victoria MLAs, Anderson said it would be "intolerable" for the city and Island to face a lengthy strike on the ferry services.

"We only make money on the tourist trade and all our supplies have to come by ferry. The peasantry who don't have the benefit of government jet aircraft have to use the ferries," he added.

Anderson said government intervention in the dispute should come as early as next Monday, if no settlement appears in sight over the weekend.

If necessary the B.C. Legislature should be reconvened before Sept. 13 to deal with the B.C. Ferries dispute as a matter of "grave urgency," Saanich-The Islands MLA Hugh Curtis said today.

Curtis, speaking both as Progressive Conservative MLA and Mayor of Saanich, said: "I think all of us are relutant to do that but the action is probably warranted."

The annual convention of the Agricultural Institute of Canada will go ahead despite the B.C. Ferries strike, an organizer said today.

But how many people will turn up for the five-day meeting here, which starts Sunday, organizers just don't know.

More than 1,200 people had been expected to attend, Kathleen Ellis of the institute's central office in Ottawa, said today.

"We've had quite a few calls from people on the mainland wondering if it's still going on and how to get here," said Ellis.

She said delegates arriving in cars will probably be directed south from Vancouver to catch a ferry to Victoria from Anacortes, Seattle or Port Angeles.

For British Columbia fire chiefs attending the annual Fire College which ended today at the new Saanich recreational centre, the problem is not getting on the island, but getting off.

"If you've got anyone with a private airplane, we sure could use it," said Bill Pearson, Oak Bay fire chief.

Several other conventions underway in the city, such as the Optimists of the Pacific Northwest who are at the Empress Hotel, are continuing undisrupted by the ferry strike.

Strachan said he has issued instructions to help stranded motorists at Departure Bay "in every possible way."

He had no information at present on what effects the ferry strike will cause to Vancouver Island food supplies, but it is "one of the things I'll have to consider."

Licensed ferry branch spokesman Peter Marshall said the officers won't sail without their own crews "and therefore vessels can't sail with makeshift crews." Picket lines would be respected, but none have been established.

No negotiations are scheduled until at least Monday when the licensed representatives are to contact Strachan.

While the issues which precipitated the walkout are "bread-and-butter ones," both Marshall and Thornber said there is support for establishing the ferries as a separate marine operation, apart from the civil service, although this hasn't been a topic in negotiations.

Thornber said the "key" to the whole dispute is that the Civil Service Commission and the government are "very reluctant" to recognize the ferry fleet as a marine operation.

Marshall said there is "some feeling along those lines" — for a crown corporation for the ferries — but it "really hasn't been raised as an issue. It's an approach they could use. It hasn't been put to Strachan, to make this a crown corporation."

Strachan acknowledged today the government has not considered establishing ferry employees as a bargaining unit separate from the rest of the civil service.

Such a move, he said, would require legislative action "and that's not my department."

Thursday night, the indications were that the walkout could be a long one.

Strachan said after one session with the unlicensed representatives "if there is a strike, it could be a long one. It probably will be."

Later, spokesmen for the ferry workers agreed, saying employees are "adamant, they want a satisfactory settlement."

WHARF STREET CHAOS

There were 600 cars in the Blackball line-ups, each tagged with a pink card indicating a reservation on vessels sailing at 6:30 and 11 a.m., 3:30, 7:30 and 11 p.m.

The Marguerite was also completely booked about noon.

"It's just one of those crisis things, where everyone is liking the excitement in a desperate kind of way," said visitor Susan Pratt from Boulder, Colorado.

Scheduled to go on the 11 a.m. Coho, she came just in time to miss the last ferry.

"We're taking advantage of a new experience," said Mr. and Mrs. Jim Forrest from Prince Albert, Sask.

"For once we're in a solid line-up and know actually, that we'll get off the Island. It's a nice feeling," said Forrest explaining they arrived in Nanaimo yesterday, decided to turn around and go back because of the strike, but failed.

"We waited in line there for a while, and then decided to beat it down to Swartz Bay, but it was booked so we arrived here about 5 p.m. yesterday.

They slept in the car, saw little of Victoria, a great deal of Wharf Street, but were still smiling.

Robbie Frankel was disappointed he lost his place in the line-up "during the chaos" Thursday evening, but he too was smiling, assured of a reservation at 3 p.m.

A resident of Casper, Calif., he described the ferry situation as "really crazy" but said he wouldn't hesitate to come back. "The city's really beautiful."

Sidney residents were up all night preparing doughnuts. coffee and sandwiches for tourists caught in 1½-mile line-up from Washington State Ferries terminal to McTavish Road.

Civil defence officials brought in emergency supplies of food, blankets and portable toilet facilities for people who began lining up late Thursday night and early today.

The Sancha committee has offered to open Sancha Hall for people needing overnight accommodation if the situation becomes critical.

There were no extra runs from Nanaimo and about 300 vehicles stayed overnight hoping there would be no strike.

Swartz Bay put on three extra sailings and all vehicles were cleared with only 30 cars on the last run.

ONE WAY TO LEAVE ISLAND

Times News Services

NANAIMO — Stuck on Vancouver Island by the ferry strike? Fred Maquire of Nanaimo has found a way out.

He is floating to the mainland in a bathtub today.

Undaunted by his last-place finish in the Nanaimo-to-Vancouver bathtub derby July 22, Maquire set out this morning on a one-man, 180-mile marathon float to Seattle.

HE WAS BURIED ALIVE

Frank Kawa was in a service ditch at a housing subdivision when the side of the trench slipped on to him.

Nearby workmen heard his muffled yell and were able to free his head within minutes.

He was pulled from the ditch by firemen after 90 minutes and released from hospital after an examination.

More Deputy Jobs on Line

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

A sweeping reorganization in the top echelon of the provincial civil service is under way with as many as nine deputy ministers to be replaced by the NDP government.

Acting opposition leader Frank Richter today accused the NDP government of conducting a "purge" of top-level administrators in the civil service, with the intention of replacing them with "party hacks, card-holders and free-loading consultants."

"No amount of double-talk can now disguise the fact that the purge is on as far as the B.C. civil servants are concerned," Richter said. He charged that "horizontal promotions" are "a dime a dozen in the buildings these days" and that civil servants "of great integrity and outstanding ability" are being done away with.

"No government in the history of British Columbia has a patronage system on the scale of the NDP government," he said.

"When the people voted in 1972 for a new government they certainly were not voting for all the party hacks, card-holders and free-loading consultants that the new government is trying to fit into the legislative buildings with expensive offices with plush rugs and drapes," the acting Social Credit leader said.

Richter said civil servants are "the point of attack now" but that every level of the service is involved and that "the idea of a free, independent civil service is in jeopardy."

"Fear is the only way to describe the atmosphere in the legislative buildings today because of the patronage attitude of the NDP government," Richter said.

Sources within the civil service and the government have confirmed that the following deputy ministers have not been ratified in the increased salary classifications authorized by the cabinet in June and are in jeopardy of being replaced:

—Johann Phillipson, deputy minister of education;

—John Stokes, deputy minister of forests;

—Valter Raudsepp, deputy minister of water resources;

—Fraser MacLean, deputy minister of transport;

—Bill Sands, deputy minister of labor.

Already replaced as deputy ministers and offered positions as associate deputy ministers within their departments are Gilbert Kennedy, deputy attorney-general for the last 16 years, and Les Hempsall, former deputy minister of trade. Hempsall has accepted the position while Kennedy is considering.

Other deputy ministers who have been replaced since the NDP government took office last August are: Ronald Worley, former executive assistant to W. A. C. Bennett, succeeded as deputy minister of travel industry by Dick Colby; A. H. Turner, replaced as deputy minister of agriculture by Sig Peterson and James Fyles, deputy minister of mines who was replaced by John McMynn.

That is the path which will be followed by deputy minister of human resources Ray Rickinson at the end of this year, with assistant deputy Jim Sadler moving in as deputy minister.

The salary classifications for deputy ministers were passed by the cabinet June 27, as were classifications for associate deputies. Deputies, under the new system, are to receive between $33,000 and $42,000 per year. Associate deputies are to receive between $25,000 and $33,000.

The government is believed to be using these new salary classifications as an opportunity to replace some of the deputy ministers who served under the Social Credit administration with people of their own choice.

In some cases, departments are being split into separate branches, each with an associate deputy minister at the head of the branch. The plan is to offer some of the ousted deputy ministers jobs as associate deputies, under the direction of new people brought in by the government to serve as deputies.

This is the case with both Kennedy, who was replaced Wednesday by Vancouver lawyer David Vickers as deputy attorney-general, and Hempsall, who was notified three weeks ago that he had had his status changed from deputy to associate deputy.

In the case of the three-sided resources department, there will likely to vacancies for three associate deputies — one for lands, one for forests and one for water resources.

Resources Minister Robert Williams is likely to bring in an outsider to fill the position of over-all deputy minister of resources, with responsibility for the three branches. On several occasions in the past, Williams has demonstrated his willingness to utilize personnel from outside the B.C. civil service to carry out functions for him.

In the case of Phillipson, the fact that he has not been ratified in the new salary classification was confirmed Thursday by Education Minister Eileen Dailly, who also said:

"I am in the process of working, in conjunction with my department, on a restructuring. There has been no final decision yet (on Phillipson's role in the department.)"

Rickinson said Thursday he has been considering voluntary retirement from his position as deputy minister of human resources "for a number of years."

He said he wanted to correct earlier inferences that he was being replaced in his job, adding that he has "never been happier" in his job than now.

Deputy ministers in the government who are believed to have been confirmed in their new salary classifications are:

—Gerry Bryson in finance;

—Dr. Geoff Elliot in health;

—William Lyle in hospital insurance;

—Dr. F. G. Tucker in mental health;

—McMynn in mines;

—Lawrie Wallace as deputy provincial secretary;

—Giles in public works;

—Lloyd Brooks in recreation and conservation;

—Colby in travel industry.

Other civil servants with deputy minister status who are expected to continue in their jobs are Arthur Richardson, chairman of the Civil Service Commission; Walter Forrest, commissioner of the superannuation branch, and J. W. Minty, comptroller-general.

Nixon States Tapes Case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon claimed in federal court today that the judicial branch of government has no power to reverse his position that the public interest requires him to keep secret White House tapes of his conversations about the Watergate scandal.

The president's latest views on the controversy were spelled out by his lawyers in a 16-page brief filed in U.S. district court in response to a request by Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox for a court order to compel Nixon to surrender selected portions of the tape-recorded material.

Citing various rulings by the supreme court and lower courts to support the President's position, his lawyers said in the brief:

"The court may tell the executive that it is to produce (material in question), but if the executive chooses not to do so, it is free to make that choice and the only power in the court is to dismiss the prosecution."

Nixon's lawyers noted that Cox, in seeking the tapes, had contended that the federal grand jury investigating Watergate would not be able to function effectively unless it was given access to the recordings.

The president contended that he — and future presidents — would not be able to function efficiently if he yielded to subpoenas for the tapes, and argued that the public interest demands that the tapes be kept secret.

The brief said it long has been established generally that "it is exclusively for the executive branch, and not for the courts, to decide whether other governmental interests outweigh the interest in a particular criminal prosecution."

Agnew Probe Still in Dark

Times News Services

The grand jury investigation of Vice-President Spiro Agnew remained shrouded in secrecy today following high-level meetings between federal investigators and the head of the justice department's criminal division.

"I know where we are; I don't know where we're going," said United States Attorney George Beall, amid reports the Agnew phase may be temporarily stalled by legal complications.

However, persons close to the investigation indicated some indictments may be returned shortly in the investigation that began last December into Baltimore County officials and engineering firms.

Assistant Attorney-General Henry Petersen travelled to Baltimore from Washington Thursday, his second unannounced visit with Beall. He sat in on an interview with a Maryland businessman who is reported to have implicated Agnew in an alleged bribery and kickback scheme.

In Gastonia, N.C., Sen. Sam Ervin denied Thursday that his Watergate committee was out to "get" the president. He accused Nixon of obstructing his investigation by refusing to release certain tapes.

Nixon's call to end the hearings, made in his televised speech to the nation Wednesday night, was quickly rejected by Ervin.

ANOTHER OIL FIRM TO LIBYA

BEIRUT (UPI) — The Libyan government took over a 51 per cent controlling interest in the American-owned Oasis Oil Co. operations in Libya under an agreement signed Thursday by the two sides, Tripoli radio reported.

The broadcast quoted Oil Minister Ezzedin Mabrouk as saying the agreement called for complete government takeover of Oasis before January 1975.

The announcement came six days after the Libyan government of Col. Moammar Khadafy nationalized 51 per cent of the Occidental Oil Co. of Los Angeles, and two months after the Bunker Hunt Oil Co. was nationalized.

It left Amoseas, which includes Texaco and Standard Oil of California, as the only group of companies that has not reached a settlement with the Libyans on the future of its operations.

One-third of Oasis is owned by Marathon Oil Co., another one-third is jointly owned by Shell Oil Co. and Amerada-Hess Oil Co., and the remaining third is owned by Continental Oil Co. (Conoco). Oasis signed on behalf of Continental, Amerada-Hess and Marathon, the radio said.

Shell, which is included in the Oasis group, has not signed the agreement and said it will refer first to its headquarters.

Mabrouk said Oasis "gave in to the conditions of this agreement" after the government nationalized 51 per cent of Occidental last Saturday.

Oasis then realized "our determination to gain full control of our oil wealth and regain our legitimate rights by all means," he said. By signing the agreement, Mabrouk added, Oasis has avoided nationalization.

Low in the Barrel

In the past few years Canadians have greeted large sales of grain to Russia and China as fortunate developments that got rid of large accumulated stocks of wheat on the prairies and cleared the way for farmers to show profits where glutted elevators and storage piles had been the prospect. The sales did in truth achieve these results, but, when viewed more deeply, they revealed a growing situation which is causing concern to world food authorities.

Statistics show that the global stocks of food are decreasing to danger points. There are smaller reserves around the world to handle the emergencies arising from bad weather conditions and other mishaps.

This trend may well be the onset of the predicament which mankind has been foreseeing for some time but not really believing — the situation in which the world will not produce enough food for the crowded populations on it. We are still far from the limit, according to most experts, and may, indeed, never reach it. But avoidance of global scarcity is going to depend increasingly on international planning and co-operation, where individual national interests and a good deal of luck have heretofore sufficed.

Russia and China may continue to feel the effects of poor crop weather and hence remain on the food-importing list. India, despite improved farming methods and better seed grain is said to be faced again with widespread shortages due to regional droughts, and may have to seek supplies overseas. The terrible drought of the southern Sahara has occupied headlines recently, and the prospects of sufficient crops for humans and their cattle are poor, even if the moisture supplies improve for the next two years.

Argentina, normally a wheat-exporting nation, is not expected to have a surplus this year, because of poor weather, and is already importing grain in anticipation of a poor harvest. Grain crop estimates for the United States have been revised downwards this year. Rice crops in Southeast Asia are threatened unless the current monsoons are particularly favorable.

But it is not the threat of world-wide shortages in this year's crops that worries the authorities of the U.N. Food and Agricultural Organization so much as the fact that the basic standby supplies — the annual carry-overs — are so low. The world is in effect living from year to year, and extraordinary weather failures or other calamities could quickly deplete reserve stocks and lead either to global scarcity or adequacy for some fortunate nations and starvation for others.

What the FAO would like to see is a joint international action that would aim at increasing production until reserve food stocks are of a size that would safely cushion all nations against sudden crop disasters.

It is not likely that the whole globe would suffer adverse weather conditions at one time. But the various productive areas of the planet, under international arrangement, should agree to store adequate supplies for contingencies which are bound to occur.

It would put us one step farther from the brink of hardship or tragedy, and demonstrate a new appreciation of the nations' responsibilities to each other — not only to aid when required, but also to avoid through proper planning, whenever possible, the need for aid. Canada could play a leading part.

The Question of Election Polls

British Columbia's ban on publicizing pre-election polls may be tested in the courts following allegations that a Social Credit party worker published a poll concerning voting preferences in the Okanagan South byelection campaign. Although Attorney General Alex Macdonald has indicated he has no plans for investigating the incident, Progressive Conservative candidate Derril Warren says he is prepared to swear an information against the man who allegedly published the poll.

Former Premier Bennett added the prohibition to the Elections Act because he thought such polls unduly influenced voters. Yet there is no prohibition against publishing federal polls in B.C., even on the day of election. The anomaly between the provincial and federal statutes does not seem of great concern to British Columbians, although commentators from other provinces often rail against it as discriminatory and a denial of free comment.

Nor is there much evidence that prior knowledge of voting patterns will influence elections. During any U.S. election California is usually aware of how the whole U.S. eastern seaboard has voted before the west coast polls are closed, yet California voters don't seem to be influenced by their eastern brethren. It is also true that private polls can be fiddled — a reality in some U.S. elections — so they are favorable to a certain candidate.

Ultimately, a poll is only a sampling of people's preferences, and often its prediction is based on too few people. In the 1948 U.S. presidential election the polls said Thomas Dewey was a shoo-in, but Harry Truman walked away with a victory. B.C. politicans conduct their own private polls at every election, and often gauge their campaigns on such results. Whether or not they should be published will be up to the courts. But it seems rather silly that British Columbians can read and argue about federal polls while provincial polls must remain in escrow.

Declare Amnesty for Nixon?

At some point in the crazy story of these times, Americans are probably going to have to think about a general amnesty not only for the draft dogers in the war but the truth dodgers in the White House.

This will be hard to arrange since the President says he won't forgive the draft dodgers, and the draft dodgers won't forgive him and probably most people are not ready to forgive either, but he can't go on like this with the President hiding out in Camp David, or San Clemente, or skulking off the coast of Florida. He should be allowed to come home with the others.

Sorting out the crooks from the moral cripples around the President, and the idealists from the cowards or revolutionaries in the armed services, is not going to be easy. We could still be debating all this on the 200th anniversary of the Republic on July 4, 1976, which would be a little awkward.

Weighing Punishment

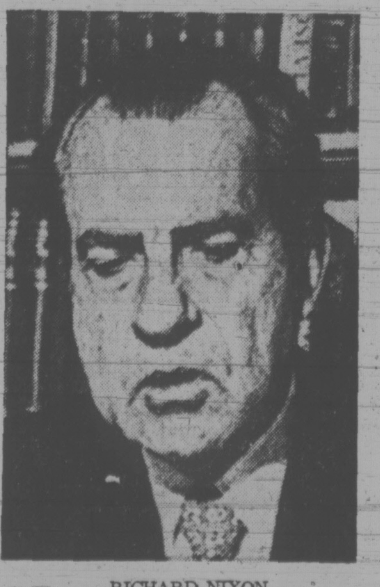
How, for example, do you weigh the punishment between a runaway Army kid who told the truth about the war, and an official who lied about the war; or an Air Force general who carried on his private war (and was "punished" with a handsome retirement pension); or a President who assured everybody he was respecting the neutrality of Cambodia when he was bombing hell out of it?

Who, in other words, is wise or smart enough to sort out all these philosophical and legal tangles and pass fair judgment on them? Are the antiwar demonstrators out in the streets, the isolated and suspicious men around the President responsible for the fear and siege mentality in the White House? Are the political fund raisers more of a problem than the corporations that give illegal political funds?

If Presidents, leaders of the great departments of government, members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and theatre commanders in Vietnam do not set and abide by the standards or enforce the rules of the government, are their subordinates to be held responsbible for the negligence at the top?

The testimony before the Senate Watergate committee is a tangle of contradictions. Likewise, the constitutional arguments in the courts over the President's right to secrecy in his own office and the courts' need to know the evidence of criminal activity contained on the President's secret tape-recordings could be debated endlessly and the arguments have not clarified but merely confused the public debate.



RICHARD NIXON
. . . let him come home?

Accordingly, the Ervin hearings and the court actions have to go on for a while, but nobody pretends they will ever come out with a clear decision on the acts and motives of everybody concerned. Leaving aside all the questions of fact still in dispute, we already have enough admitted facts to know that something was deeply wrong both in the conduct of the war and the conduct of the last Presidential election.

In this situation, it is understandable that many people long for clear and tidy solutions — Most of them for the exoneration of the President, and some of them for his impeachment, conviction or resignation, but like most things in life, that's not the way it's likely to be.

Too much has been revealed and too much has been concealed to expect definitive answers to the tragedy. The President could suggest or even provoke the House of Representatives to bring in a bill of impeachment, knowing very well the Congressmen have no heart for it and hoping this would dramatize the crisis and finally proclaim his innocence, and put the whole tragedy behind him.

But even such a grandstand play wouldn't do it. He is going to have to go on with the doubts of his people for over three years. He is the head of the national family, and his Administration has been caught on admitted evidence of being unfaithful to the Republic, but the main hope now is not divorce but reconciliation.

Spirit of Amnesty

In short, at some point, hopefully by the end of this year, at least the spirit if not the act of amnesty will have to be considered. Nixon said when he was rejecting amnesty for the draft dodgers that the word meant "forgiveness," but actually it comes from the same root as "amnesia" and means, not "forgiving," but "forgetting." And in the end this may be the only way to compromise this unhappy period in American history.

This does not mean doing nothing about the crimes of the last election or its spectacular dirty tricks. In fact, the crisis has already produced new attitudes of independence in the Nixon Cabinet, new campaign-financing legislation, and new efforts on Capitol Hill and in the courts to restore the balance of equal powers.

But if resolution of all these problems clearly and simply is out of the question, as it undoubtedly is, reconciliation is the only hope, and this means a kind of amnesty or forgetfulness, if not forgiving, by the end of the year.

MAURICE WESTERN

But What If Prices Go Down?

OTTAWA — The federal government has a curious habit of revealing in its actions policy assumptions which are seldom, if ever, stated.

One is that inflation is a permanent fact of life in the modern world. The government may act to "cool off" the economy; that is, to bring an uncontrolled inflation under control. But whether Ottawa is attempting to impose its will on events or not, inflation continues; a tide that moves with varying force in one direction and cannot be reversed.

There is much talk at the moment about indexing or tying pensions and similar payments to the cost of living. Such descriptions of the actions being taken are inaccurate. But the Prime Minister was accurate when he said in the statement of Monday night that benefits under the Old Age Security and Guaranteed Income Supplement plans will, if Parliament approves, be made "more responsive to price increases" and that the Canada Pension Plan, as amended, will provide "for the full escalation of these pensions, fully protecting their purchasing power."

Governed by Index

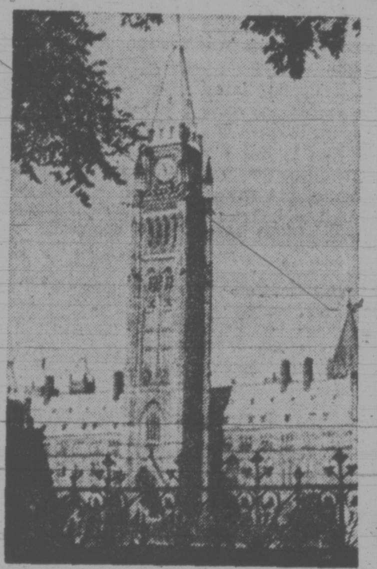
If pensions and benefits were in fact tied to a cost of living index, they would move up or down in accordance with the index. Further, if inflation was considered other than a permanent condition, the government would make careful provision for movement in either direction. After all, it is normal for ministers, when pensions are before Parliament, to warn against irresponsible demands and to assure the House that the burden proposed is all that can reasonably be imposed on the nation's taxpayers at the particular time.

If inflation should be succeeded by deflation, it would be found — assuming that these calculations are sound — that the burden was excessive unless the government's costs also fell.

But it has apparently occurred to no one to make such prudent provision for movement in either direction. It is enough to provide that pension payments "will be escalated," now quarterly although with a two month time lag. Thus at each stage the government adds to its fixed costs; in the latest instance by about $100 millions, which was once considered a substantial sum. If inflation continues to gain momentum, we can doubtless look forward to even more frequent escalations involving ever larger fixed costs.

The reasonable conclusion seems be that policy is based on the assumption that we cannot have another deflation. If the economy should behave perversely in some temporary fluctuation, the government under a law truly relating pensions to a cost index would have to withdraw benefits once conceded to the nation's pensioners. Among politicians this is an unimaginable prospect.



Contradictory Ideas

Perhaps this is our situation. Inflation has had a long run; persisting even in periods of relatively high unemployment. Some people have managed well enough in the inflationary years to regard the phenomenon as a good thing which ought to be welcomed. Others, including those whose savings have been eroded, are naturally resentful.

Those with longer memories recall the very grim deflationary years. They also seemed endless to a generation which endured them.

It would be easier to accept the view that inflation has been permanently outlawed if governments generally had a better record of managing domestic economies and their common international concerns.

But our own government, which is perhaps not unique in this respect, appears to entertain contradictory ideas of the state of the outside world. Through all the monetary crises of recent years, our ministers of finance have remained commendably calm; confident at every stage that the uncontrollable would be controlled at the next meeting of financial experts. Some other, less disciplined ministers of finance have been utterly baffled by the crazy course of gold prices and have said so publicly.

Can Do Nothing

On the other hand, it is the official view in Ottawa that we can do nothing about inflation because the world is out of joint. We have confidence in the world on some days; on others no confidence whatsoever. Policy can be upset by the gnomes of Zurich, by Arabs controlling oil supplies, by American political scandal or by an unexpected crisis. If inflation creates an artificial and distorted price structure, how can we be proof against some incident precipitating a crisis of confidence with consequences some of which may be quite as irrational as the recent gold rush?

There are various reassuring answers, as always. Are they reassuring enough to justify a belief in the irreversibility of inflation as a new law of the economic universe? If the belief is wrong, it is very certain that the government or some successor will find itself in grave difficulties.

Words such as "escalation" will go out of fashion and it will doubtless become a reproach that former ministers spent and committed future expenditures with such gay abandon, in the apparent conviction that, in this most fortunate of countries, money grows on trees.

When Drink Takes Precedence Over Food

With the growing unity and mutual dependence of the world's population, the need for greater equality in the standard of living becomes ever more clear. Levels, which in the affluent countries run at twenty or more times the rates of consumption of the least affluent, cannot be justified, especially in respect to non-renewable resources, and to the world's food supply, now at such a critical point.

Attention must be given to two aspects of this situation: 1. Cutting down on over-consumption, and 2. Allocation of priorities in our use of resources, and progressive elimination of our wastes.

On July 31, Dr. Frank Loew, director of the animal resources centre of the University of Saskatoon, held it to be obscene to feed wheat and barley to animals, when starvation was facing tens of millions of people.

If this is obscene, still more so is the deliberate waste and destruction of foods in the production of liquor, by millions of tons.

What is the picture? The Brussels office of the European Economic Community reports that the annual increase of five per cent in barley malt in beer production is 400,000 tons. This means that breweries now take (1972) 8 million tons of barley a year from world supplies.

How great is the drain of liquor production on food resources in Canada? In 1970 (latest available statistics) the liquor industry used the following food supplies (Canada Statistics):

| | |
|---|---|
| Grain | |
| Barley malt | 305,555.5 Tons |
| Corn | 418,643.2 Tons |
| Rye | 80,571.2 Tons |
| Wheat and other | 26,460.1 Tons |
| Total | 831,230 Tons |
| Sugars: | |
| Molasses | 42,678.5 Tons |
| Sugars | 8,889.4 Tons |
| Caramel Syrup | 21,917 Gals |
| Fresh Fruit | |
| Grapes | 55,569.3 Tons |
| Other, incl. berries | 2,526.5 Tons |
| Total | 58,195 Tons |
| Grape concentrate | 21,917 Gals |
| Fruit extracts, essences | 56,874 Gals |
| Total | 78,791 Gals |
| Raisins, Currants | 12,420 Tons |
| Grape Spirits, Blending Wine | 413,911 Gals |

(Gals. are imperial at 16 lbs.)

Canada's ratio of malt used is 3.8 per cent of the world total. If the same ratio obtains in wine and spirits, the world destruction of foods is: Grains and malt, approximately 20 million tons, with close to one million tons increase a year; with a corresponding total in amount of fresh fruit sugar and concentrates, and raisins and currants (multiply by 100 and divide by 3.8.)

Reporting in the midst of this writing, the CBC news (Aug. 13) states that Canadians are drinking 30 per cent more than in 1948 (also increased over 1970), and that in European Mediterranean countries, half the hospital beds are filled with patients there because of illnesses due to alcohol.

This huge amount of food destroyed annually classifies the liquor industry as parasitic on the labor of farmers and others, and with its very low intensity employment level, and its inordinate social damage, as an economic and social liability.

Governments need to curtail sharply this misuse of our food supplies, as was done after the Second World War to feed European and other nations.

With rates of hospitalization in Canada reaching 25 per cent and 50 per cent in Europe as above, and with other alarming statistics, the world would be infinitely better off if this destruction ceased entirely.—Harold T. Allen, 2140 Kings Rd.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of August 17, 1913

Because a druggist refused his request for cocaine a young man employed in the camps around Brooks, Alberta started a short lived reign of terror in the town last night. Armed with two revolvers and his pockets bulging with dynamite, he had the police and citizens in a state of fear. Chief Hesketh seized him when he commenced his violence, but before he could reach his pockets, the crazed man twisted himself away, and pulled two sticks of dynamite out and threatened destruction. He escaped but was captured today and will be sent up for trial.

Keeping the press at bay

Muzzling the Media

By MARK GAYN
The Toronto Star

Oh what a wonderful, lovely, unbelievable Commonwealth meeting. It had computers, pretty "media assistants" in orange uniforms, and a bar-lounge to make any chain hotel proud. It had badges, Mounties, complimentary briefcases, garden parties and briefings.

Each of the 800 or so newsmen accredited to the meeting was programmed. At any of the three hotels for the press, a media assistant would punch some keys, and in a split second a mini-computer would tell you if there are any messages for you at the "media centre."

The centre itself, a splendid affair with technicolor partitions and modern furniture, was borrowed from the Department of National Revenue. It was packed with aides, guards and newspapermen. The last of these tried to look purposeful and well-informed, but succeeded only in looking perplexed.

This is hardly surprising for the press has been had. The girls and the electronics razzmatazz only half-conceal the unpalatable fact that the participants in the conference were carefully shielded from newsmen. In Singapore 31 months ago, correspondents could wander about in the lobbies of the conference building, and talk to the delegates as they came out — sometimes expressly for the purpose. They stayed at the same hotels and shared the same coffee shops.

Here, reporters were barred from the reconstructed railway station where the delegates were meeting, and they were housed separately. On the weekend the delegates were taken to Mont Tremblant, in the Laurentians, for what was described, so help me, as "a private, secure, unstructured opportunity" to exchange views. There the press was almost totally excluded.

If one listens to the Canadians, one of the most remarkable achievements of the meeting is that there were no prepared speeches. Instead, all the microphones on the table were live, and any delegate could speak up whenever he felt like it. But wait. Before Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau delivered his speech of welcome and purpose, he asked Britain's Prime Minister Edward Heath and Nigeria's military ruler, General Yakubu Gowon, to be ready to open the talks. Heath prepared an extemporaneous speech which went on for 35 minutes.

Then, says a Canadian on the inside of things, "We had back-and-forth, back-and-forth discussion. I am joyous."

This happening reminds one less of a conference of 32 states, with their differing interests, fears, dreams, and passions, than of a well-run hospital or a university seminar.

So contagious was the mood set by the hosts that the visiting delegates were infected by it. Whereas in Singapore they were eager to tell the world through the press what they thought of this or that issue, or what problems their countries faced, here they suddenly realized it would be abominable manners to reveal signs of discord or grievance, and so they shied away from the press.

They still welcomed television exposure — ah, the appeal of electronic gadgetry — but even then some of them became difficult. An eminent Asian statesman, invited to appear on a major European network, as he did during the Singapore conference, responded: "But you must first get me a star interviewer, as you did in Singapore. Otherwise, the program bogs down."

Not the least notable feature of the meeting is that it was over-policed. It was not security-conscious but security-obsessed. The tiny patch of Ottawa between the new Holiday Inn, where many of the delegates stayed, and the conference hall must have had more security agents per square foot than the FBI academy.

The sigh of relief when Uganda's President Idi Amin decided he would stay away from the conference must have been heard in Africa. This distinguished statesman (who last year drove his Asians out after stripping them of all their possessions) was the one delegate most likely to produce unseemly demonstrations here, and that is something the hosts were anxious to avoid.

But the overstress on security helped to add to the atmosphere of unreality enveloping this conference, in which dispute was carefully avoided, friction concealed, and the press so skilfully managed it could hardly do a good job of telling the world what the 19th Commonwealth meeting was all about.

One wonders how much more meaningful this conference could have been if, in the realization of the part the press plays in the mechanism of modern government and politics, the hosts had invited the delegates to come to the media centre for the kind of candid and significant encounters which, in Singapore, made the Commonwealth seem relevant and important. Or, again, if the hosts had allowed newsmen into the conference lobbies, or if the delegates and newsmen had been permitted to share the same hotels.

But to do that, Ottawa would have had to rethink its own attitudes toward the role of the press in our time — and there is, regretably, no sign it has been doing that.

The Case Against Controls

By DESMOND MORTON

A cunning little political scenario is running through the Ottawa gossip mills these days. Though most people now expect a federal election no earlier than next spring, some pundits now believe that the Liberals could be planning to force an earlier dissolution by imposing a massive freeze on prices and incomes.

Such a move would have all the flashy dynamism which people sometimes admire in governments. It would meet the desires of newspaper editors, street-corner orators and other experts on the economy. Above all, it would wipe out the only really distinctive policy Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield appears to possess. Instead of campaigning as the sole friends of the harried consumer, the Tories would be forced to bleat a plaintive "me too."

The most satisfying victim would be the NDP. After months of catering to NDP Leader David Lewis and his colleagues, a number of Liberals can hardly imagine a fate too terrible for them. In Parliament and at their recent Vancouver convention, the NDP have come out strongly against the kind of prices and incomes policy already attempted by the British and American governments and now demanded by the Progressive Conservatives. Since organized labor shares the NDP's opposition, a campaign on the issue could encourage some of the most uninhibited union-bashing in decades.

NDP Vulnerable

Certainly the NDP would feel very vulnerable. To people justifiably dismayed by the rising tide of prices, a command to stop sounds quite reasonable. If the NDP is opposed it must be, as some editorial writers have insisted, because greedy union bosses have a hammerlock on the party leadership.

On the other hand, it might also be true that prices and incomes freezes are a bad idea. It may be cold comfort for Canadian shoppers but prices in some countries, including Britain, have risen much faster than our own. Where controls have actually worked, they have produced appalling side-effects — like those which compelled the U.S. government to retreat from its food price freeze.

If the NDP differs from the Conservatives, some Liberals and a good many editorial writers, it is largely because of a difference of opinion about the basic causes of inflation.

Advocates of freeze and control lay a great deal of emphasis on a disease they call "inflationary psychosis." Knowing that next month's prices will be higher, we buy now. Lending institutions boost their interest rates because they know that their capital will be a little more emaciated when they see it again. Prices go up a dime, not a nickel, "just in case."

There is enough truth in this diagnosis to convince a lot of people that the guilt for inflation rests with them, not with more fundamental weaknesses in the economy.

Despite the accompanying bureaucracy and apparent meddling with the free market, that is why freezes and controls have become part of the stock-in-trade of conservative politicians like Richard Nixon, Edward Heath and Robert Stanfield. The economic system, they insist, is as sound as a dollar; it's the people who are a little crazy.

They need a sharp shock to break the spell.

The NDP, some Liberals and a good many economists see the problem differently. Instead of inflation being the result of collective foolishness, the alternative explanation is that inflation is due to genuine shortages of some basic necessities like food, shelter and energy and that, in some cases, market structures and government policies have aggravated the problem.

What is frightening about the freeze-control strategy is that it would almost certainly make the problem worse.

Both explanations could be illustrated by a glimpse at the housing industry. If current incredible increases in the cost of land, rent and building materials were due to a special dose of original sin among developers and landlords, complicated by public folly, a freeze on rents, mortgage rates and land costs might take the steam out of inflation.

The alternative explanation is that a perfectly predictable housing crisis has been allowed to develop. The same postwar baby boom which crowded maternity wards, schools and colleges is now in the market for a home and the shortage is acute. Controls and freezes, without other drastic measures to overcome the shortage, would dry up investment in new residential construction.

Surely the answer to present soaring housing costs is to expand the supply. The major contributor is the cost of land. Though governments have been reluctant to undertake land banking, private speculators have entered the field in a major way, amassing large tracts around our major cities. Though Canada now has a capital gains tax, a specially favorable rate encourages this kind of windfall earning.

One possible technique would be to boost the tax rate for land speculation until land hoarders spilled their holdings on the market, stabilizing and even reducing the price of development land.

Deliberate steps to overcome a shortage in housing, food supply, feed grains or transit buses adds up to a policy economists call "supply management."

As an alternative to the freeze and control approach, it has a number of advantages: It avoids the massive bureaucracy which, despite Stanfield's disclaimers, controls involve. Older Canadians can still remember the Wartime Prices and Trade Board with its flood of orders, regulations and directives.

Pseudo-Psychology

Supply management tackles an economic problem with economic means, not with pseudo-psychology. In agriculture, for example, it is compatible with Canadian progress in orderly marketing, a very different system from the chaos of the American agricultural economy.

Supply management approaches to the farm community could emphasize long-term guaranteed prices and an end to the boom-bust cycles which governments have imposed on Canadian farmers particularly in the wheat industry. Supply management means stable prices for them — and for consumers.

All of this may not convince those Canadians who believe that they, alone in all the world, can control inflation by psychological means. But it does mean that the NDP — and the Trudeau government if it chooses to act — can tackle inflation at its root: Too much money chasing too few goods.

Not in Peacetime

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

It is almost impossible to control prices when commodities are in short supply and many buyers are after them. It has been done, to an extent, in wartime. In wartime patriotism persuades the bulk of the public to co-operate and rigid controls are possible; but even then black markets develop, a variety of devices are brought to play to avoid price ceilings, and there are distortions in production. In peacetime the factors working for success do not exist.

A good many Canadians are urging food price controls. They should look at the United States.

A food price freeze was imposed there on June 13, even though the government had been advised that it would merely worsen the situation. But the people were demanding it, Congress was getting ready to impose it, and President Richard Nixon could not afford a further reason for unpopularity.

The freeze did not work. Although it was not supposed to apply at the farmers' level, it did. Farm costs were rising, but the freeze prevented consumer prices from rising to accommodate them. Middlemen stopped buying and farmers cut back on production and also — by disposing of breeder stock — on their ability to produce in future. Within weeks the government had to retreat, withdrawing the freeze on all but retail beef prices.

How much longer can it stay with the freeze on beef? Supplies are being withheld from the market, transported through Canada to avoid the freeze, bought in Canada and taken south. Some areas are already without beef.

Conditions in Canada are not precisely the same; but they are not entirely different. The uncertain position of the U.S. government drove it to an action it knew it should not take. The Canadian government is also in an uncertain position, a minority position. Both the Conservatives and the New Democrats, one or other of which is needed to maintain the Liberals in power, have demanded controls on food prices.

The public also wants food prices controlled. It has seen them positively bounding upward; it is unwilling to admit — although statistics prove it — that the upward leap is occurring in part because food prices had lagged in the past while other prices — and incomes — rose. But food price controls would not work in Canada now.

The demand for foods, and especially for protein foods, exceeds the supply. There is a world shortage of proteins. There is also a developing world shortage of grains. In Canada wheat stocks have fallen from more than one billion bushels at the end of the 1969-70 crop year to something like 350,000,000 at July 31. The Wheat Board may have to reject some sales to maintain a safe domestic buffer.

Yet Canada must export to live, and Canadian farmers are not going to produce for a domestic market which will not pay what the world market would pay. They would find a way around the domestic restrictions or restrain production — as they are restraining it right now on wheat and other grains.

The United States has found that trying to control food prices while the demand exceeds the supply has only succeeded in decreasing the supply and increasing the prices. Canada, in existing circumstances, would do no better.

It would be a foolish Canadian public which demanded controls, and irresponsible government and opposition parties which acceded to the demand.

Other Side of the Fence

By FRANCIS HOPE
New Statesman

The Italians have recently been suffering one of the 20th century's science-fiction nightmares; no petrol. Due to a strike (or, according to the Left, a manoeuvre of the oil companies who want to put up prices) all petrol stations in Italy were closed last week, except for those on the autostrade. There, the science-fiction side was in full control, with queues of up to an hour for a ration of three gallons. Bribes offered, special circumstances invoked; pleas, threats and lamentations filled the air, but not the tanks. At last the energy crisis had begun to bite.

It couldn't have happened to a nicer people, though it must be said that queues and strikes are not exactly unknown even in the powerhouse of go-ahead Europe. There has just been a bakers' strike in Naples, caused by an increase in the price of flour which they were not allowed to pass on to the public; and, on a more trivial level, it took me more than an hour's queueing to cash a traveller's cheque in Florence. But the Italians are not also the world's most ecologically responsible nation.

The Italians have scattered their country with motorways in heroic profusion, and are now just as lavishly scattering the motorways with cars. When industry strikes — the outskirts of Genoa are a particularly fine example — it leaves a pustulating wound. The land of Carrera marble has gone wild about plastic (which is perhaps less shocking if one remembers it is also the land of Venetian glass), and the supermarkets are selling fewer quaint old local salamis, using up even the pig's intestine as an outer case, and a lot more cellophane-wrapped Danish meat loaf.

Most of which, I am afraid, seems to me quite as it should be. The Italians have been too poor for too long to listen to lectures about the virtues of wood and leather, the charm of washing woollen cloths in a cold mountain-stream, or the recycling process of low-impact transport technology (which means that donkeys will eat anything).

I had an uneasy feeling, when the ecology boom got under way, that I was soon going to find myself on the wrong side of the fence. William Morris and Tolstoy and Guild Socialism, and all the professional Puritan side of the English Labour Party which so got up Orwell's nose, had trodden some of these paths before, and left them signposted to disaster. I felt no schadenfreude against destructive, wasteful, modern man when I queued for my petrol. I just hoped that someone would soon invent a better form of transport, like Auden's "noiseless electric brougham." A true ecologist would have hoped that people might learn to stay put.

A heretic should define his position carefully. So: I am not in favor of unchecked industrialisation, nor oil on beaches, nor non-returnable bottles, nor fish made poisonous by mercury. I think the earth should be regarded, and treated, as a garden rather than an open-cast mine, and the use of its finite non-replaceable resources is as serious a problem as the possible outbreak of nuclear war.

Nor am I much impressed by the argument, so dear to the anti-ecological school, that all this fuss is going to make everything much more expensive, particularly for the poor. Public health regulations make housing more expensive; stopping children working in mines makes coal more expensive; safety belts make cars more expensive. Forcing manufacturers to produce goods with less public nuisance of noise, smell and slag will make those goods more expensive, but may still be a net saving. To avoid bearing most heavily on the poorest, one should narrow the poverty gap, not let cut-price pollution rip.

All this I solemnly believe, and undertake to uphold in thought, word and deed. I also hate throwing away food, however rotten, and clothes, however worn, use both sides of the paper, and would always rather patch something up with old string than buy something new.

But I don't believe, and I believe that many whole-life earth-friends do believe, that one can lay down one ecological law for the rich and another for the poor—either among nations or among individuals.

If restraints on the consumption of energy, for example, are an urgent need, one must start with the heaviest consumers. A log-fire in a country cottage is no sign of virtue. Nor is a stockbroker bicycling to work while his wife takes the children to school in the Volvo. It may save him money. It does not save his soul. Nor does it tell us how the population of India is to make its necessary journeys.

I also don't believe—and more strongly believe that others do—that the odd traffic jam or even a world-wide energy crisis proves that the whole rational, scientific, Faustian ethos is wrong.

I was skeptical, four or five years ago, when a scientific friend of mine said that all this outcry about the environment was going to make it harder to get medical research grants in the future. I think there is a serious danger of it now.

When one confronts a full-blown counter-culture irrationalist like Timothy Leary, it's hard to know which end of the egg to attack first: the extent to which these vicarious Luddites rely on technology in their own lives, or the bland ignorance with which they dismiss the contribution it could make elsewhere.

It is not an ennobling experience to hear young men with plane-tickets in their pockets upbraiding the petty bourgeois of Saigon for his desire to buy a Honda. It is made still worse if the upbraiding is hung about with mantras and Pueblo Indian pottery and horoscopes.

* * *

There is a bold description in Saul Bellow's Mr. Sammler's Planet of the way in which some young Americans have deliberately made themelves helpless in a mechanically complex society. To be scientifically ignorant is bad enough. (Bad enough for me, at any rate, to regret it in my own case.) But to disguise one's ignorance as a conscious rejection is adding untruth to unwisdom.

But that isn't, surely, what the environmentalists are up to? It depends which of them you last met. The drop-out computer programmer who actually prefers growing mushrooms in a Gloucestershire farmhouse is obviously proof against such criticisms. The fine-arts major from Vassar who is doing a begging stint in Kabul is not. Which stereotype seems to you more truly representative is, as always, your way of taking sides.

Suicide Bells Peal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Church bells tolled 491 times here today in memory of those who have junped to their deaths off the Golden Gate Bridge.

"A melody rising over the San Francisco Bay area should dramatize the seriousness of the suicide problem on the bridge," said Charlotte Ross, director of the Suicide Prevention Centre in San Mateo.

Dozens of churches in San Francisco, San Mateo, Marin, Alameda and Contra Costa counties tolled their bells at 10 a.m. for the 491 men and women who died in the 240-foot fall to the waters below, she said.

Golden Gate Bridge directors have been discussing a proposed $800,000 suicide barrier — slender upright bars on the bridge railings — to keep people from jumping from the 6,451-foot-long suspended span.

The graceful cables and mist-shrouded towers of the bridge have attracted more known suicides than any other bridge in the United States since it opened in 1937.

Closed-circuit television cameras constantly scan the walkways for possible suicides, and suicide-prevention teams patrol the span.

Bridge people say three suicides are prevented for each one that succeeds.

Seven persons have survived the plunge to the water.

FIRE THREAT DAMPENED

NAKUSP (CP) — Rain helped to control a shingle mill fire which threatened to destroy this West Kootenay village Thursday.

Strong winds were blowing the fire, fought by residents, the volunteer fire brigade and forestry service officials, before rain began falling.

At one point, water bombers were requested but were never used.

At Kinnaird, about 70 miles south of here, water bombers were used to stop a fire which destroyed five acres of land.

Now Buses Being Recalled

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — General Motors of Canada has notified owners of 868 buses delivered since 1963 to replace a power steering bracket and clamping bolt that could result in a loss of steering control.

No failures have been reported, GM said Thursday.

RHODESIA REVOLUTION SEEN IN SALISBURY

SALISBURY (Reuter)—African majority rule is inevitable in Rhodesia, but the ruling Rhodesian Front party is prepared to bring the country "crashing in ruins" rather than face the fact, Centre Party Spokesman Jack Humphries said today.

Humphries said that if the government continued to promote hatred and hostility between black and white there could only be one outcome and that was revolution.

He told the Rhodesian National Affairs Association that it was time the country's white minority population stopped bluffing itself about majority rule.

Not only was it inevitable, but its advent had been greatly hastened by Rhodesia's unilateral declaration of independence from Britain in 1965, he said.

Texasgulf Hearing To Go On

HOUSTON (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Woodrow Seals refused to dismiss a petition Thursday brought by Texasgulf, Inc., that seeks to block a proposed takeover of the mining and metals firm by the Canadian Development Corp.

Attorneys for CDC made the motion for dismissal after Texasgulf rested its case in the federal court hearing.

The Texasgulf petition alleges CDC's tender offer for 10 million shares of Texasgulf common stock is illegal and based on a conspiracy with a second defendant, Noranda Mines Ltd. of Canada.

The offer, if allowed, would give CDC 35 per cent of Texasgulf stock and effective control of the U.S. firm.

Meanwhile, a witness for the CDC says he has the highest regard for the management of Texasgulf Inc. and knows of no intention by CDC to replace that management if its tender bids succeeds.

Gene Woodfin, a stock dealer who arranged the $290-million CDC bid for 10 million Texasgulf shares, was the first CDC witness called after Texasgulf rested its case.

Woodfin said CDC never gave any indication of any desire to take over the management of Texasgulf although CDC would like to have representation on the Texasgulf board commensurate with the size of CDC shares if the offer succeeds.

He argued also that it would benefit Texasgulf to have one-third of its stock off the market and in the hands of a strong organization such as CDC.

Pt. Alice Problems Forecast

VANCOUVER (CP) — Figures released Thursday by a federal fisheries research biologist indicate the sulphite-process pulp mill at Port Alice may have trouble meeting eased effluent control standards.

Controls imposed March 30 against Rayonier of Canada (B.C.) Ltd. were eased by the Pollution Control Board in a decision Aug. 7 after an appeal against the original permit.

A spokesman for Rayonier said Thursday that a further appeal is still "under consideration . . . we can't give a definite answer yet."

Legislation allows an appeal of board decisions within 30 days to either the provincial cabinet or the British Columbia Supreme Court.

The original order required the company to maintain the dissolved oxygen in the water at five parts a million at Buckholz Rock, eight miles from the mill.

The site is where Neroutsos Inlet and Quatsino Sound meet. The mill is near the head of the inlet.

The reduced order allows readings of four parts a million until the first phase is completed and moves the test site to Cross Island in the sound, 10 miles from the mill.

Dr. John Davis said tests conducted July 23-29 in the two water bodies found a reading of 4.56 ppm at a location close to the new testing site.

Davis, spokesman for a seven-person team of environmental protection service and fisheries research scientists, said readings were taken within a metre of the surface and on a falling tide.

A falling tide would tend to allow the effluent to flow to sea while a rising tide would hold it closer to the mill and let oxygen levels at the test site to rise somewhat, he said.

The reading was taken when the mill was on reduced production in an effort to meet the original standard. The company said following the appeal that full production would be resumed.

Readings at Buckholz Rock ranged between 2.6 and 3.9 ppm on a falling tide and no more than 4.4 on a rising tide, Davis said.

Oxygen depletion was found up to four miles into Quatsino Sound, indicating a problem developing there as well, he said.

One Price For Gas

EDMONTON (CP) — Provincial enforcement of a consistent wholesale price on gasoline is a future possibility, Cal Lee (PC—Calgary-McKnight) said today.

The move is one of several possibilities being examined by the provincial task force on consumer affairs.

Lee, head of the task force, said the problem is that oil companies sometimes sell gasoline at discount prices to "off-brand firms" in apparent competition with their own franchise outlets.

This is done by Gulf, Texaco, Esso and Shell, he said. Franchise operators feel "they're at an unwarranted disadvantage" under the present system, he said.

'Human Error' Blamed For Village Bombing

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A B-52 bombing accident that left an estimated 137 people dead and more than 260 wounded in the Cambodian village of Neak Luong on Aug. 5 probably was caused by human error rather than mechanical failure, according to Pentagon sources.

An air force investigation into the tragedy is still under way and no official determination has been made yet as to precisely what went wrong or whether negligence charges will be filed against any of the bomber's six-man crew.

But preliminary indications are said to point toward a failure by some crewmen to activate a critical part of the giant plane's electronic bombing system as the most likely cause of the worst bombing error of the war.

Aside from the tragic demensions of the accident, which came just 10 days before a congressional ban on bombing went into effect, the air force is deeply concerned over the circumstances surrounding it since it could turn up a flaw — albeit a rare one —in the procedures followed aboard B-52s.

Even though the huge eight-engine B-52s have been dropping conventional bombs on Southeast Asia for eight years, these bombers and their crews are all part of the Strategic Air Command whose primary mission is to deliver nucelar bombs if an atomic war ever started.

Thus, selection of B-52 crews and control over all details of how a bombing mission is to be flown is of critical importance to SAC.

While there have been other bombing errors by smaller fighter-bombers and some by B-52s during the millions of flights in the nine-year air war—including the bombing of the French mission in Hanoi —Pentagon sources believe the Neak Luong incident may be a unique situation.

Most of the other errors, at least those that are known about, generally are attribued to such things as mechancial failures in which bombs do not come off their bomb racks as quickly as they are supposed to, or bombs that are dropped too quickly because the bombers themselves come under attack.

There have been other instances of poor target information being supplied to airmen and occasionally some poor bombing runs made by some pilots.

Paperwork Costly

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States government is losing its war against mountains of official paperwork, federal auditors said Wednesday. The General Accounting Office said in a report to Congress that the federal cost for writing memos, signing directives, keeping files and issuing reports is $15 billion a year.

U.K. PRESS UNIONS WARNED

LONDON (CP) — Fleet Street publishers issued a warning to union chiefs Thursday that the country's 10 biggest newspapers will shut down if printers continue to disrupt production.

Sporadic strike action by the printers has so far been limited to The Sun, a morning tabloid, and its sister paper, The News of the World, published Sunday.

The printers want a nine-per-cent raise but the publisher says government anti-inflation regulations would allow only a four-per-cent increase.

The employers, acting together through the Newspaper Publishers Association, invited union leaders to discuss the situation but a similar invitation a day earlier was ignored.

U.S. Papers in Newsprint Pinch

NEW YORK (CP) — United States newspaper publishers are concerned that a shortage in supplies of Canadian newsprint may affect their publications at a time of rising demand for advertising space.

Many newspapers report newsprint stocks are lower than usual, resulting in some curtailment in daily editions. Because of heavier costs, prices for newspapers and advertisements may eventually be forced up, some executives suggest.

Stanford Smith, president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association ANPA, says the newspaper industry is faced with "a serious situation that will be with us for a couple of years."

And in Ottawa the government is keeping a close eye on growing shortages of newsprint, but no controls are being considered at the moment, a trade department official said Thursday.

Reports indicate the publishing industry is beginning to feel the pinch of strikes in the pulp and paper industry that have cut about 6,000 tons from the average daily production.

Weekend Magazine, a color Saturday supplement in the Victoria Times and 20 other newspapers across the country will forgo its Sept. 1 issue because of a newsprint shortage.

The publishers of the Canadian Magazine, another weekend supplement, also will not publish a Sept. 1 edition for the same reason.

At least five mills in Quebec and New Brunswick are strikebound by members of the United Paperworkers International Union (UPIU) and union spokesmen indicate more plants may shut down in further disputes.

Increased world demand and lack of sufficient mill capacity to meet it are cited as major reasons for a tightening of newsprint supplies.

In Vancouver, Denis Timmis, president of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., Canada's largest forest products company, said demand for newsprint is outstripping supply and higher newspaper prices and advertising rates are likely to take place in the future.

In general, newspapers are beginning programs aimed at conserving newsprint. They are gauging press runs more accurately, cutting down on free copies to employees and trying to reduce waste in the pressroom.

Variety, the weekly show-business newspaper, eliminated some feature columns and shortened others to conserve newsprint. Its main supplier has been International Paper.

Trio to Follow Newest Comet

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (Reuter) — Like the Three Wise Men almost 20 centuries before, Skylab astronauts will be following a bright light this Christmas.

Space officials announced Thursday that the third crew in the Skylab space program will be launched into space Nov. 9 so that they will be able to observe and photograph the comet Kohoutek—believed the brightest of this century—when it streaks across the solar system in December.

The comet—thought to be more than 50 times brighter than the famed Halley's Comet—is named after its discoverer, Lubos Kohoutek of the Hamburg observatory in East Germany, who first observed it last March 7.

The Skylab 3 astronauts—Lt.-Col. Gerald Carr, Dr. Edward Gibson and Lt.-Col. William Pogue—will be the only men able to observe the blazing comet in the clarity of outer space without the distortion of earth's atmosphere.

Space scientists say the comet is actually a "big icey snowball" which becomes more brilliant as it nears the sun and the solar heat begin to evaporate its crystaline particles into gas.

It is thought to be made up of some of the oldest materials in the universe—much older than the earth or the moon.

Observers on earth will see Kohoutek as a brilliant white streak across the morning sky beginning about Dec. 1. On Dec. 29 it will be at its brightest — when it swings around the sun— and will appear like a bright searchlight.

LITTLEST THIEF IN THE BLOCK

MIAMI (AP) — Police say a seven-year-old boy has admitted breaking into 21 homes and hauling off as much as $1,600 worth of goods.

The three-foot-six child began crying when arrested Thursday and said he sold most of the loot to get money for hot dogs and ice cream, police reported.

"It breaks my heart, man, I tell you," said Detective Phil Cowart. "He's a helluva cute kid. I felt sorry for him."

Cowart said he first suspected a child in the six-week string of break-ins because of the small windows the burglar climbed through and the nature of the loot taken.

Police said the boy at first took just small change; toys and fishing gear but became more sophisticated after older youths told him to look for more expensive items.

The haul for each of the last three or four burglaries amounted to $300 to $400 in watches, jewelry and potrable radios, police said. But police said the boy sold the items for just a few dollars.

The boy's name was not released. Police said his parents are separated and apparently live in New York, leaving him to live with his grandmother here.

The neighborhood ice cream vendor said the boy was "a big spender," Cowart said.

Police recommended counselling and have decided not to prosecute the boy.

Abortions Charged

MONTREAL (CP) — Dr. Henry Morgentaler, advocate of more liberalized abortion laws, was arraigned Thursday on four charges of performing illegal abortions and was returned to jail pending a bail hearing today.

The 50-year-old doctor, who has had similar charges pending before the courts for three years without coming to trial, appeared Thursday on a preferred indictment which bypasses regular preliminary steps and sends an accused directly to trial.

Justice Maurice Cousineau of the Court of Queen's Bench set the Morgentaler trial date for Sept. 4, on charges of performing illegal abortions in his east-end Montreal clinic on Sept. 7, 1972, and Feb. 19, March 2 and Aug. 15 of this year.

Dr. Morgentaler has publicly admitted performing more than 5,000 abortions and has been pressing for abortion law reform since 1967.

CHICAGO (AP) — Prices for most agricultural commodity futures moved around wide upward and downward ranges on the Board of Trade Friday, but wheat futures prices closed strong.

Soybeans were mostly higher, but corn was lower and oats closed mixed.

Two days of limit declines in most products brought selling pressure left over from the previous session. Running counter to that influence was a commerce department report that 1.1 billion bushels of wheat and 1.1 billion bushels of corn already have been committed to exports.

Agriculture department figures places the export commitment much lower, but traders took this news as bullish also. It seemed to indicate the administration would be less likely to place export controls on wheat and corn.

Corn prices rose and fell in broad sweeps, finally closing a few cents lower than Thursday.

Special Quotations Number Silenced by Firm

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Richardson Securities, one of the few brokerage houses to provide a separate number for stock quotations, has dropped the service.

Victoria manager H. J. Kennedy said today calls for quotations will go directly to the customer's salesman.

He said the change was made because stock salesmen have not had much to do during this generally slack market year.

The special line to a quotations girl had been instituted at a time when salesmen's lines had been constantly busy taking buy and sell orders.

"When it gets busy, the service will be restored," Kennedy said. "It will have to be. But in the meantime we are encouraging customers to get their quotations directly from their salesman."

The chief advantage of the special quotation line was that it enabled customers to get information on stocks if their salesman's line was busy.

The main disadvantage was people using other brokerage houses would phone the special Richardson number for instant stock quotes.

The quotations phones were ringing all the time but the phones of salesmen were silent.

He stressed that if salesmen's phones get too busy again to handle quotations, the service would be restored.

Craigmont

Craigmont Mines Ltd. reports a nine-month profit of $7.1 million or $1.40 a share, compared with a profit of $2.2 million or 44 cents a share in the same period of 1972.

The company said the higher earnings are the result of higher copper prices, reduced costs and increased sales volume.

Sun

Investment income and gains from the sale of securities helped increase net income for Sun Publishing Company Limited to $1.5 million during the first half of this year.

Net income for the period represented a gain of $87,700 from the corresponding period of 1972.

C. B. Delbridge, chairman of the board, said the gain was offset by a reduction in earnings of $105,000 from the company's 50-per-cent equity in Pacific Press Ltd.

"This reduction occurred in spite of increased revenues and essentially because of increases in newsprint costs, labor rates and costs incurred in the start-up of new mechanical processes," Delbridge said.

"Advertising rate increased effected on April 1 and July 1 should partially offset these increased costs in the last half of the year."

Retained earnings at June 30 were up to $24.9 million from $22.9 million a year earlier.

The Sun, Vancouver's evening newspaper, is publishhed by Sun Publishing Co. Ltd., for the proprietor, Pacific Press Ltd.

Profit of Brenda Mines Ltd. of Peachland zoomed to $4,451,000 or $1.04 a share in the six months ended June 30, the company reported in a statement on six-month earnings distributed Thursday.

The profit for the period compared with a loss of $922,000 or 21.5 cents a share for the corresponding period of 1972.

The company said major factors contributing to the improvement were higher world metal prices and stronger demand for molybdenum. Brenda, controlled by Noranda Mines Ltd., of Toronto, is one of Canada's largest producers of molybdenum.

First City

First City Financial Corp. Ltd. had a net profit of $575,035 or 41.5 cents a share in the first six months of 1973 compared with a net profit of $438,436 or 31.7 cents a share in the same period of 1972, an increase of 31 per cent.

President Samuel Belzberg said the company's main subsidiaries, City Savings and Trust Co. and Pacific Leasing Corp. Ltd., had both achieved new levels in revenues and earnings in a highly competitive market.

PEPSI FINED

WETASKIWIN, Alta. (CP) — Pepsi-Cola Canada Ltd. was fined $250 in provincial court here Thursday after being found guilty of violating the Alberta Beverage Container Act.

The court agreed with the plaintiff, the Department of the Environment, that Pepsi-Cola refused to collect its bottles from a City Universal Depot.

The case was the first successful prosecution under the act, in effect since Jan. 1 to help fight pollution caused by the littering of beverage containers.

The act established a chain of depots in the province to collect used containers from the public for recycling.

The depament charged that Pepsi-Cola would not pick up bottles, nor pay the depot for the bottles it had collected. Maximum fine is $1,000 under the terms of the act.

U.S. Gas Stations Threaten Shutdown

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With service station operators in several parts of the U.S. threatening to close in protest, the government has delayed until Sept. 1 the start of new price rules for gasoline and diesel fuel.

The present price freeze on gasoline and diesel fuel remains in effect until then.

But the freeze ends and new price regulations begin for all other petroleum products at midnight Sunday as scheduled.

Midnight Sunday had been the deadline also for gasoline and No. 2 diesel fuel. The two-week delay was announced Thursday by John Dunlop, head of the administration's cost of living council.

The new Phase IV regulations, when they do finally take effect for service stations, will involve new price ceilings based on the seller's actual cost plus his profit markup — in dollars and cents, not percentage — as of Jan. 10, 1973.

Many retail dealers complain that this profit provision will mean money out of their pockets and that thousands of them will be forced out of business.

Robert Jacobs, an official of both the Illinois and Indiana gasoline dealers associations, said in Chicago Thursday he expected 90 per cent of the service stations in the Chicago area to shut down in protest Aug. 24-26, with signs reading: "This station closed by U.S. government bungling."

Dealers in Michigan had voted to close all next week. A Pennsylvania association planned to shut down over Labor Day weekend.

Jacobs said directors of gasoline associations across the U.S. would meet in Houston this weekend and would be asked to lend their support to shutdowns.

While service stations were threatening to close, shoppers have stopped buying meat.

Wholesale meat buyers think shoppers who hoarded groceries during Phase III price controls have now stopped going to the supermarket and started eating from their freezers.

This is the explanation given for the sudden plunge in prices on midwest wholesale meat markets the past two days.

"The people just aren't buying any meat now," a spokesman for the Livestock Market News in Des Moines said. "They are simply refusing to pay the higher prices now. Those who have meat stocked in the freezers are living off that, and those who don't have any meat stocked are refusing to buy any more."

Grain prices have also taken a dramatic dive since breaking record highs earlier this week, but the turnaround is because traders are waiting for today's weekly report on wheat available for export, thus causing a lack of buying enthusiasm.

Forest Fires Rage, No Relief in Sight

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Thousands of men were battling forest fires in four western states today and officials saw no immediate relief from the winds that fanned the flames.

Some homes in Oregon were reported destroyed by the fires, which were burning in areas that have gone without any appreciable rain since mid-June. Other states affected were Washington, Idaho and Montana.

"There are strong winds in nearly all the areas and we don't see any significant relief for two or three more days," said Darwin Wilkins, a fire weather meterologist.

Wilkins said winds up to 40 miles per hour blew across mountain ridges. "These winds may diminish a little Saturday," he said.

Temperatures, ranging above 100 degrees in Montana Thursday, are expected to cool as much as 20 degrees tonight with arrival of a new weather system from the north.

But that system also should bring another round of winds, Wilkins said.

The forestry department reported 12 homes destroyed in La Grande, Ore., where about 400 men joined firelines. National guardsmen helped evacuate some residents on the edge of the rural town.

More than 50 men fought a fire that destroyed more than 100 acres of timberland just inside the west entrance of Yellowstone National Park. A park spokesman said, however, the town of West Yellowstone, Mont., was not threatened.

Meanwhile, a raging 6,000-acre forest fire that destroyed eight buildings on the outskirts of La Grande Thursday shifted to the east today, out of control and whipped by a 30-mph wind.

Also in Oregon, a 7,000-acre fire burned out of control in the Mt. Hood National Forest.

The 400 firefighters at La Grande used 20 bulldozers, 20 pump trucks, three retardant bombers and three observation helicopters to fight the blaze on state-protected private land.

National Guard trucks evacuated dozens of La Grande families Thursday night before the course of the fire turned away from town. The fire had earlier destroyed two residences, four summer cabins, and two barns.

Fire boss Fred Austin said this morning the blaze had reached the nearly dry bed of the Grand Ronde River.

About 580 men were on the lines of the Mt. Hood fire in the Rock Creek reservoir area today.

Tom Harlan of the U.S. Forest Service said Thursday night's 35-mph wind had dropped to about 15-mph this morning and crews had ringed all but about three miles of the fire. He said the lines were holding, but forecasted higher wind gusts threatened to spread the flames beyond the firebreaks.

Now Warren Claims NDP Breaking Election Rules

KELOWNA (CP) — Conservative leader Derril Warren claimed Thursday a New Democratic Party brochure containing 80 endorsements of the NDP candidate in the Okanagan South byelection is a breach of the British Columbia Elections Act banning straw votes.

Warren said the endorsement of Bryan McIver amounts to a straw vote because it obviously is the result of a sampling of opinion to distinguish party preferences.

He said two NDP supporters in Okanagan South told him that some of the persons named and pictured in the brochure were approached after the election writ was issued. Section 166 of the act specifically bans this, he said.

Warren, who also is seeking election in the riding vacated when former premier W. A. C. Bennett retired, earlier this week accused the Social Credit Party of breaking the act's ban on taking straw votes.

Both Attorney-General Alex Macdonald and Premier Dave Barrett, however, rejected Warren's request for a government inquiry into the charge against the Social Crdit party.

Macdonald, however, said he will not prevent any illegal action being taken against any candidate by another if the complainant feels he has enough evidence to substantiate a charge.

Macdonald recalled that there had been some problems in the provincial election of 1972 concerning solicited testmonials taken after the election had been called.

Arab Hijacker 'Drunk, Mad' Claims Golda

TEL AVIV (AP)—The drunk Libyan who forced an Arab airliner to land in Israel probably will be charged with hijacking the plane and endangering the lives of the other 124 persons aboard, a magistrate told him today.

Magistrate Eliezer Goldberg ordered the Arab, Mahmoud Toumi, held for 15 days while police investigated the hijacking. "I do not deserve to be kept in jail for doing something I believe in—showing the friendship of an Arab for Israel," Toymi protested.

"I didn't hurt any of the passengers. I planned this action for several years so that nobody would be harmed."

After he surrendered his two pistols to Israeli security men Thursday, Toymi told a news conference: "Since I was a boy I was influenced by the persecution and hard life of the Jews in Libya. I have no asylum except in Israel."

"A drunk, mad boy," said Premier Golda Meir.

* * *

Officials said Toumi is a 37-year-old Libyan merchant who lived in Lebanon and carried a Libyan passport. He said he hijacked the Middle East Airlines Boeing 707 jet "to show that not all Arabs want to throw the Jews into the ocean."

"Some Arabs believe Israel must have a country, but Cairo prevents the Arabs by force from showing this."

Israel's chief of staff, Lt.-Gen. David Elazar, said Toumi will be put on trial because "hijackers all over the world should be punished."

The Lebanese airliner had 125 passengers and crew members aboard. Toumi took control 45 minutes after the plane took off from Benhazi, Libya, for Beirut.

"He just came into my cockpit as we were near Cyprus, holding two guns and saying he wanted to go to Israel, and "If you don't go, I will kill you and your passengers,' " said Captain Adel Kawas, the Lebanese pilot. He added there had been no check of the passengers at Benghazi for hidden weapons or explosives.

* * *

The man is reported to have fired one shot but hit no one.

Israel at first was reluctant to let the plane fly over Israeli territory and denied the pilot permission to attempt a landing. But Kawas said he told the Tel Aviv control tower he was coming "whether you like it or not."

Israeli Phantom jets escorted the airliner down, a precaution in case it was on a suicide mission to crash into an Israeli city, Defence Minister Moshe Dayan said.

After the landing, Toumi let the women and children exit by the emergency chutes, and one woman was reported slightly injured. Israeli security men boarded the plane, and Toumi surrendered after only a slight struggle.

NO CURBS IN CANADA FOR DRUGS

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has no plans to follow the United States proposed restrictions on the tranquillizers Valium and Librium, a spokesman for Health Minister Marc Lalonde said Thursday.

"The drugs are presently under prescription and the department is satisfied there is enough of a safety measure right now."

The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration plans to restrict the use of the tranquillizers as there is no limit on prescriptions and it is feared the drugs may flood the illicit market.

'Brutal Repression'

DELANO, Calif. (AP) — Cesar Chavez says he will urge his striking United Farm Workers Union to call off their pickets in the wake of the first fatality in the long-simmering dispute with grape growers and the rival Teamsters union.

"The police, the growers and the Teamsters have joined hands in brutal repression of our strike," Chavez said after Thursday's shooting death of a veteran UFW picket.

Chavez said he will urge the union's executive board to call off picketing until government protection can be provided because "we don't want any more people hurt."

Juan De La Cruz, 60, was shot in the chest by someone firing from a passing pickup truck in Arvin, 50 miles south of here.

Freak Shows Banned by CNE

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian National Exhibition placed an immediate ban today on all freak shows at its midway attractions folllowing the removal Thursday of a five-year-old retarded child who had been displayed as the "monkey girl."

"I am opposed to the display of anybody who is born with an unfortunate handicap," CNE President Douglas Palmer said in an interview. "Our directors made a policy this morning that this sort of thing will not be allowed on our midway."

Police and Children's Aid Society officials intervened Thursday to remove the child from the midway's "beelieve-it-or-not" show after the girl's mother was advised it was illegal to put a child under 16 out to work without a permit.

But Bill Bernard, master of ceremonies at the freak show, said the girl is not suitable as an exhibit now, but he still hopes to use her in a show next summer in Spokane, Wash.

During the first day of the CNE, the child was led on stage by her brother while the master of ceremonies described her abnormalities.

Bernard told the crowd the girl is 17, but appears to be five because of a birth defect which made her resemble "a shaved woolly monkey." The girl is as dextrous with her feet as with her hands, and is also a diabetic, he added.

"There's nothing you can do for her except give her good love, constant care and every now and then a little tickle," he said, tickling her.

When the girl began to cry and turned her head away from the crowd, Bernard explained that "it's her first public exhibit and she's a bit nervous."

After the show, Bernard began selling miniature Bibles at 50 cents each, saying the proceeds would go to the child's upkeep. About 15 persons bought them.

The Children's Aid Society spokesman said the girl has unusually long arms and legs, but in no way resembles a monkey. The society is looking into the case, she added.

TRAVEL MONEY 'WASTED'

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal public service spent at least $3.5 million on foreign travel in 1971-72.

An incomplete list of departments and agencies shows the department of industry, trade and commerce laid out $675,686.71 on trips to places like Peking, Budapest and Casablanca.

The Urban affairs department, however, spent only $3,166 sending staff out of the country.

The list does not include the departments of defence, external affairs, energy, environment, health and welfare, manpower and immigration or supply and services.

Maxwell Henderson, auditor-general during the period covered in the list, says "there has been trouble in the past with civil servants wasting money on overseas trips."

But, he says, he restricted his criticism to "taking up the matter with departments."

$1 Million Livestock 'Charade'

By PAUL JACKSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Alberta MP Gordon Towers Thursday launched a vigorous attack on the Liberal government over its controversial program of controls on beef and pork exports.

Towers (PC—Red Deer) said that even if Prime Minister Trudeau knew nothing about farming, at least Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan should have tackled the situation from a common-sense point of view.

In an official party statement, Towers said even if controls had to be imposed, they should have been imposed Friday night rather than Monday night. By Monday night, producers already had huge stocks in transit to the markets.

"Why the hell don't these guys use their heads once in a while? Eugene Whelan would do well to use his mouth a little less and his brain a bit more. This week's charade in Ottawa cost Western livestock producers about $1 million needlessly. If the announcement had been made on a Friday, the producers could have made orderly preparations and market trading would not have been so confused."

Towers, elected to the House of Commons for the first time in the Conservative sweep of Alberta last Oct. 30th, described the government's move in this area as one of "panic and an ill-prepared decision."

"This was a stupid piece of timing — asinine as far as livestock producers are concerned. It caught hundreds and possibly thousands of producers with livestock in transit to markets."

Towers made no mention of government statements that traditional export patterns will be allowed to continue unhampered but that abnormal "raids" on Canada's beef and pork supplies will be banned. However, he said that because of "rampant confusion" and sharp price reductions in markets Tuesday and Wednesday, many producers were forced to withhold their cattle and hogs from markets.

"This compelled large numbers of them to truck the livestock back to their ranches and farms. Because of the unusually high heat in the prairie provinces this week — temperatures in the 90s — this double-trucking caused significant weight losses among the livestock."

The Red Deer MP said weight shrinkage, the double transport costs and the waste of valuable time — "all occasioned by the Liberal Government's panic actions" — represented an extra and totally unnecessary burden for Western producers.

He also had words for union officials and management involved in the current railroad tie-up.

"The railway strikes are preventing adequate movement of red meats from western packing houses. To keep operating and keep employees working, the packing companies have resorted to export shipments. Now that the government has curbed export shipments, it is urgent the railways get meat products to eastern Canadian markets."

The 54-year-old MP suggested that union and management officials involved in the dispute give the same priority treatment to red meats as they give to grain.

"This would increase stocks of beef and pork in the East and be a positive contribution to relieving the upward price pressures facing Canadian consumers."

Homes Washed Out

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — Rainstorms in central Mexico have destroyed about 100 homes, forced about 10,000 people to evacuate and caused more than $1 million worth of crop damage, police said Wednesday. No deaths have been reported.

Teachers Asking Strike Right

The British Columbia Teachers Federation (BCTF) Thursday asked Education Minister Eileen Dailly for legislation this fall allowing teachers to strike over learning and working conditions.

In a brief presented to Dailly at a two-hour meeting, the BCTF also asked for changes in the Public Schools Act to restore compulsory membership in the organization and to increase sick leave for teachers and make it portable between B.C. school districts.

Dailly refused to comment on the requests today, saying: "I'll be studying the brief and, of course, contacting the BCTF in the near future."

BCTF president Jim MacFarlan said the brief got "a very good hearing" but federation leaders expected no commitments and received none.

The brief said the scope of annual salary bargaining between school boards and local teachers associations should be expanded to include "all conditions of employment and of the learning environment."

These would include bonuses, grievance procedures, promotions, transfers, leaves of absence, class size, teaching time, equipment and materials, and deployment of teaching and non-teaching personnel.

The BCTF urged keeping compulsory arbitration when negotiations don't produce salary settlements, but giving teachers the right to strike when school boards or the provincial government unilaterally alter conditionns of employment or fail to correct "intolerable" ones.

Peter Bunn, chairman of the Greater Victoria School Board, said today he personally opposes granting the right to strike to teachers.

"I hope Mrs. Dailly does not change legislation for any reason whatsoever," he said. "I'm just completely opposed to giving teachers the right to strike."

East Areas Talking Cross-Border Trade

CHARLOTTETOWN (UPI) — New England governors and Eastern Canadian premiers today agreed to begin joint efforts to co-ordinate trade, transportation and tariff policies to provide easier access to markets in both countries.

In a resolution adopted following three hours of discussion on mutual transportation problems, the governors and premiers also pledged to continue an exchange of information on transportation needs, problems and policies.

In addition, they agreed to set up an advisory committee to make joint recommendations on regional tranpsportation, trade and tariff matters.

Gov. Thomas Meskill of Connecticut, co-chairman of the two-day conference, said, "Ideally, everyone would like to see free trade (between the two countries) but there are so many forces working against it.

Premier Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick urged that forest, agricultural and fish products be permitted free entry into the United States, and that certain manufactured goods be allowed free entry into Canada.

Terrorists Shell Ulster Police Station

BELFAST (UPI) — Gunmen surrounded a tiny rural police station on three sides Thursday and attacked it with mortar shells and small arms fire, the army said.

Terrorists later blew up a pub about 10 miles away and in Londonderry, the outlawed Irish Republican Army said it executed an informer.

A British army spokesman said heavily-armed gunmen surrounded the police station on three sides at Pomeroy, a small agricultural village 30 miles west of Belfast, and mounted a gun and mortar barrage that lasted about 15 minutes.

Red Missiles Pacing U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has caught up with the United States in developing multiple ICBM warheads which can be steered to individual targets, U.S. Defence Secretary James Schlesinger said today.

The Russians have successfully tested multiple warheads on two of their missiles, including the SS18, the world's largest ICBM, Schlesinger said.

The first Soviet deployments might take place by early 1975, he predicted.

At a Pentagon news conference, Schlesinger said the new warhead tested for the SS18 appeared designed to carry at least six hydrogen bombs in the megaton range, adding "it could have been more."

He said a new warhead successfully demonstrated for the smaller SS17 was designed to carry four warheads with substantially lower explosive power than those for the SS18.

A megaton equals 1 million tons of TNT.

The missile test, conducted within the Soviet Union, did not employ live bombs, Schlesinger said.

But U.S. intelligence analysts were said to have been able to calculate the size of bombs that would be fitted on the missile by studying data from the tests.

Schlesinger did not say how he knew the new warheads had been successfully tested, but the United States regularly monitors Soviet missile progress with reconnaissance satellites.

Brockville Pits Power Against Whalley Pitching

It's Brockville, Ont., against Whalley of British Columbia in tonight's final of the Canadian Little League baseball championships at Lambrick Park.

And it's also power against pitching in the same order.

The big, Brockville bats boomed out Thursday night for 11 hits including three home runs in an 8-2 victory over Calgary Centennials. This reversed a previous decision, Calgary having handed Brockville a 5-2 defeat earlier in the tournament.

Thursday, however, it was no contest after the second inning.

In the first, Mickey Collison slammed his third home run of the championship with Perry Edward on base and in the second inning Brockville scored a pair on two singles, two walks and a Calgary miscue.

Brockville put the game out of sight in the third when Edwards hit a three-run homer and pitcher Kevin Brownlees followed with a blast over the scoreboard in centre field.

Brownlee was stingy on the mound during the game, allowing Calgary only four hits. The Albertans got their first run in the second when pitcher Ron Blasseti singled, Doug Kot was hit by a pitch, the runners moved up on a passed ball and scored on an infield out.

A base on balls to Shain Chisholm followwed by singles by Jeff Stoughton and Darrell Kline accounted for the second Calgary run in the third. They were blanked the rest of the way.

Brownlee struck out 11.

Tonight the Brockville power meets a sterner test. Whalley pitchers have yet to give up their first run of the championship. It took Whalley 10 innings to get by Sherbrooke-Lennoxville of Quebec in their first game, but their pitchers Glenn Oster and Terry Scramstad only allowed two hits in that 4-0 triumph.

Then Jerry Atamanchuk followed by blanking Calgary 8-0 on four hits in their second start.

Collison, who blanked Sherbrooke, 2-0, in Brockville's second game, will likely get the starting assignment for Brockville tonight with Oster almost certain to start for Whalley. Game time is 6:30.

If Whalley wins, the B.C. team will represent Canada at Williamsport next week in the Little League World Series; if Brockville wins, a deciding game will be played at Lambrick Saturday at 2 p.m.

Field Hockey: A Lady Is Impressed by B.C.

The lady was polite enough — she gave her name — and what she wanted to talk about was what a great game field hockey was, and would anyone be interested in the view of a visitor?

She had been impressed by the showing of the young B.C. team (which included eight Victorians) in the Summer Games and also the visiting New Zealand side here this week, and she thought perhaps the sport deserved a little more mention.

Besides, she was on vacation, would be returning to Britain soon, and thought with a little more effort and a lot more support field hockey could become very popular and perhaps one day Canada could enjoy a higher status in the game. Yes, she had competed internationally.

"Not that Canada will immediately become first class," she warned. "That would be too much. But there is much talent here and the girls should be commended."

She also thought people might be interested that: Field hockey is played in 60 countries! The Canadian girls ranked higher internationally than their male counterparts; women can shoot a ball as fast as 75 m.p.h.; the game stands for excellent conditioning — an unfit player should never be considered; and the game can be as rigorous for ladies as it is for men — the sticks and ball are just as hard for both.

Historically, the game was devised from cricket, or so the story in England has grown:

A Question of Origin

It seems that a group of cricketers were standing around one wet summer's day, a light rain was falling, and the field wasn't dry enough for cricket. It wasn't soggy enough to stop some sort of hi-jinks; so the boys started to bat the ball around, as boys will.

That was in Teddington, about 100 years ago, and thus field hockey was born. Now it is the official game of the British Army, who took it to India, where it immediately caught on, and the East Indians and Pakistanis haven't let go since.

The game is amateur there, much like Russian ice hockey. Soldiers are promoted strictly on their ability — in field hockey, because that's mostly what they do. And that's why they do it very well.

So be it, but then there's the other side of the bat — a "back stick" is an infraction, you know. And the recollection here was that Persia had something to say about the beginning of the game, and even the Greeks had a name for it, or a game like it, 2,500 years ago.

There is also the suggestion that the English didn't exactly invent it at Teddington, but may have stolen the idea from a game British soldiers saw in France and which at that time was called "hoquet". The translation from French to English created only a minor problem except that "hokay" finally came out "hockey" and that is how the sport got its name.

'Nice of You to Ask'

Mrs. Pat Hall, president of the Vancouver Island Ladies Field Hockey League, was quick to oblige.

Yes, she was pleased with the showing of the B.C. team (under 23) and said that six of the Summer Games team would be seen in action here on the occasion of the visit here of the University team from Northern Ireland on Aug. 27 and 28. "They should be a little better," she admitted, "but our girls are improving."

Meanwhile, two Victorians — Dianne Whittingham and Jennie John — will be playing on the Canadian national side against Australia at Toronto on Sept. 6, and five Victorians — Whittingham, John, Ann Bober, Caroline Penn and Kelly Shepard—will be representing B.C. in the nationals at New Brunswick. Australia will play the Island reps here on Sept. 18 in what is obviously the pre-season highlight. So please keep that date open and thanks for asking.

As to class rating, Mrs. Hall feels Canada is definitely improving. "The men's team was the standby team for the Olympics last year and we are very close to the top 16 in ladies."

How close? "Australia and New Zealand were invited to Holland this year for the 75th anniversary of the game there,.. but I don't know why Canada wasn't."

Well said, and further, because of the good show in the Summer Games, Mrs. Hall hopes "to get a far more active junior program started this year."

As to the torgeli idcpo

junmior program started this year."

As to the true origin of field hockey, the reply of a true diplomat:

"I don't know; it's an old game."

Dick Escapes Woods

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Dick Lotz was out of the woods, Bruce Devlin was out of the tournament and Ben Crenshaw was off and running going into today's second round of the $200,000 golf tournament.

"I've been in the woods so long nobody remembers who I am," the slump-ridden Lotz said Thursday after taking the first-round lead with a five-under-par 67 on the 7,212-yard Pleasant Valley Golf Club course.

Devlin, the Australian veteran who won this title last year, was disqualified for taking an improper drop. He signed for a 71, but played the ball from the wrong place after going into a hazard on the 15th hole.

And Crenshaw, the most highly-touted youngster since Jack Nicklaus, shot a 71 that he called "very mediocre—just another round of golf.

"'I wasn't particularly happy with it. I didn't play particularly well," he added.

It was his first round as a professional.

Lotz, who has been in a slump since 1970, held a one-stroke lead over Bert Yancey and Rik Massingale, tied at 68.

Major Junior A Hockey Tagged as 'Slave Market'

EDMONTON (CP) — A study of the rights of individuals in amateur hockey in Alberta has severely criticized the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA), saying hockey at the Major Junior A level "is little different from a slave market."

The report, commissioned by the Alberta department of culture, youth and recreation, says "the constraints upon the individual rights of hockey players at the upper, pre-professional levels . . . are so serious as to cry out for immediate and drastic action."

"At this level, the amateur hockey system is little different from a slave market in which the promoters and dealers have taken all power unto themselves and have reduced the status of the individual to the point where he has become a pawn of the system."

The report, prepared by L. W. Downey Research Associates Ltd. of Edmonton, calls for the Alberta government to:

—Establish an amateur sport or hockey ombudsman or commission;

—Prohibit contracts between non-adults and amateur sport teams;

—Declare invalid agreements between a player and a team or association restricting the freedom of the player to play with the team of his choice;

—Declare invalid any sale or trade of a player in any amateur sport without his written consent;

—Prohibit amateur teams or associations from receiving compensation for costs used to develop players' skills in any sport.

An ombudsman would evaluate conditions of amateur sports in Alberta, initiate and enforce legislation and adjudicate disputes between associations, teams and players.

"In declaring itself the final and absolute authority in the establishment of hockey policy and in the control of hockey players, the association has attempted to remove itself from public accountability and to deny the possibility of external arbitration and review mechanisms."

Many of the CAHA's bylaws impose invalid restrictions upon the freedom of individuals and the CAHA "vests in individuals and committees far more discretionary power over other individuals than any free society should tolerate."

The CAHA denies hockey players their rights to natural justice by sanctions against individuals who appeal decisions in the courts, the report says.

It Was All for Olga

MOSCOW (AP) — The Russians won four gold medals on the first day of the World University Games and held one major news conference—for Olga Korbut.

She wears the red colors of the Soviet Union, but she belongs to the world.

They almost tore down the sports palace when the gymnastics marvel showed up Thursday night for the finals of the women's team optional exercises on the beams and bars.

They went into hysterics when she pirouetted, leaped and bounded through her final number like a cross between a Bolshoi ballerina and a high jump champion.

When she'd led the Soviet team to another gold medal, as she had done so often at Munich, she and her team-mates were taken to the press room for a formal interview.

But the reporters only had questions for Olga—in German, French, English and Russian, especially Russian.

"We cannot accept accolades and congratulations," an interpreter announced frettingly. "We must have only questions."

Nobody wanted to ask Olga questions. They just wanted to look, admire and wonder.

Although perfectly poised and articulate, Olga, 18, appears to be embarrassed by all the attention she gets. She looks as if she'd like to run and hide.

While reporters prepared for the interview, she sat at the big green-covered table—all 4 feet, 11 inches and 80 pounds of her—and sipped lemonade, thumbed through a picture magazine and giggled with her friends.

Do her team-mates think she is spoiled and perhaps getting self-centred because of all the attention lavished upon her?

Pagan to Coach

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies asked waivers on utility-infielder Jose Pagan, 38, Thursday in order to give him his unconditional release and add him to the coaching staff of the National League baseball club.

Canadian Girl Third In Moscow Pentathlon

MOSCOW (CP) — Dianne Jones of Saskatoon picked up Canada's first medal in the World University Games, finishing third in the women's pentathlon Thursday.

Nadezhda Tkatchenko won the pentathlon to give the Soviet Union its fifth gold medal. She finished with 4,629 for the five-event pentathlon spread over the first two days of the competition.

Tatiano Vorkohbo of the Soviet Union, who turned in a best time of 24.1 seconds in the final event — the 200-metre run — was second with 4,444 points and Miss Jones had 4,370.

On Thursday the Russians won four gold medals.

With a big boost from the 18-year-old Miss Korbut's daring leaps and spins, the Russian women won the team optional exercises. Japan was second and Hungary third.

Canada was sixth with 105.15 points — the Russians had 114.5.

The day's only other gold medal went to a long-striding, Yugoslav, Daniel Korica, who sent cheers resounding through massive Lenin Stadium with a step victory in the 10,000-metre run, a test of more than six miles.

Voikin took the shot with a put of 64 feet, two inches, leading a 1-2-3 east European sweep. Poland's Leszek Gajdzinski won the silver and Alesander Karisnikov of Russia the bronze.

In men's basketball, Canada whipped Iran, 111-71, while the United States overwhelmed Britian, 123-74.

Canada is playing in one of eight groups in preliminary round-robin competition. The two top teams in each group will advance to a round of 16.

Loverock of Vancouver placed second to Doris Maletzki of East Germany in the women's 100-metre heats to qualify for the semi-finals. The winners had a time of 11.8 compared with 11.9 for Miss Loverock.

In early volleyball play, the Canadian women's team lost, 3-0, to Bulgaria and the men dropped a similar decision to Brazil.

Bowie Balks; Plan Fails

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A proposal that major-league baseball adopt interleague play in 1974 failed to pass Thursday when commissioner Bowie Kuhn declined to cast a tie-breaking vote.

Kuhn said the National League, meeting in joint session with the American at baseball's annual summer meetings, raised a legal question concerning his authority to cast a vote on the interleague play question.

Kuhn said later he felt the legal question was only one reason that he should not cast the vote, and added that he has cast votes on many other issues in the past.

The eight professionals and 75 amateurs took 121 strokes to complete the course.

Salmon Fishing Steady Around Most of Island

Salmon fishing was reported to be "steady" around most Vancouver Island waters but a few bright spots serve to liven up weekend prospects.

Chinooks and resident coho (nearing seven pounds) are biting in Finlayson Arm and Whiskey Point is the favored location for the same type of return farther north in Saanich Inlet.

Strip and minnow remain the most effective producer off the Deep Cove Marker for chinooks up to 12 pounds and "the odd five-pound coho." Best approach is to fish deep in the early morning.

Oak Bay fishermen are hauling in chinooks up to 20 pounds and pinks up to eight pounds with super-strip from Trial Island, The Gap and Halibut Flats. Others spin-casting off the rocks with Deadly-Dicks have been lucky.

Ling cod up to 40 pounds are being landed near Discovery Island.

Buzz-bombers using the four-inch "polar bear are boating chinooks up to 30 pounds and the odd coho nearing the eight-pound mark along the kelp bed in Pedder Bay.

The major portion of the anticipated pink run hasn't yet shown up in Sooke waters but a few of the advance fish are being picked up near Secretary Island along with the odd coho and chinooks up to 28 pounds.

Cowichan Bay is still yielding some good-sized chinooks and fishermen working along Bold Bluff are seldom being disappointed.

Small jack springs and coho are biting off Nanaimo and strip-casters are catching chinooks up to 20 pounds near Five Fingers and Ballenas Islands. The first signs of some larger coho (averaging six to seven pounds) showed up in the latter area on Monday.

Across the Island, the Franklin River section of Alberni Inlet is producing chinooks up to 40 pounds and coho are biting near Sarita and Rainy Bay.

White and purple or white and black bucktails are taking coho up to eight pounds off Bates Beach and Saratoga Beach at daybreak. Trollers are also catching the odd spring in the same area.

Coho are reaching 14 pounds and several tyee over 50 pounds have been landed off Campbell River. The "Forestry" kelp bed, Frenchman's Pool and Tyee Pool are all good areas to try.

Trout fishing should begin to perk up a little with this cooler weather although there has been some action in that department from Cushion Lake on Salt Spring Island as well as in Cowichan Lake, Nanaimo River and Upper Campbell Lake.

Bass are reported to be providing hot action in Elk, Beaver and Prospect lakes.

In addition to Ken Mayea of Duncan, who won the $25,000 top prize in the B.C. Salmon Derby, eight of the 22 other prize-winning fish were taken out of Cowichan Bay last weekend . . . Island winners, in order, were: J. P. Fudali of Chemainus (10th-27:15½), Ralph Phillips of Victoria (11th-27:13½), Wayne Dobbs of Chemainus (15th-25:09½), Brian Gray of Victoria (16th-25:08½), Albert Leurington of Victoria (18th-24:13), H. G. Szetat of Port Alberni (23:10) and Ray Livingston of Duncan (23rd-23:09½) . . . L. Howard of Seattle, who finished 14th, also caught his 17:02-pounder in Cowichan Bay.

Barry Dash of Parksville captured first prize of $50 in the recent Parksville Fish and Game Association's annual salmon derby . . . His chinook tipped the scales at 21 pounds, four ounces . . . Peter Phillipe, also of Parksville, won the $25 second prize with a 19:08-pounder . . . Mrs. Bobbie Watkins of Beachcomber topped the coho section with a 9:07 catch and W. R. Allen of Victoria was second with 6:09-pounder.

HANK AARON
. . . blasts No. 702

Hank Thinks Mark Will Survive Year

By The Associated Press

Hank Aaron doesn't think he will equal Babe Ruth's home-run record of 714 this season.

"I don't really think it's possible," the Atlanta slugger said Thursday after he had walloped his 702nd as the Braves handed the once-proud Chicago Cubs their 11th straight National League defeat 10-2.

"I'm just not going to play that many more games. I'd like to hit five or six more and I think that's possible."

The Braves have 38 games left to play, but the 39-year-old Aaron doesn't figure to play in all of them.

Aaron's latest homer, his 29th of the season, came with two on off a 2-2 pitch by Cub pitcher Jack Aker and highlighted the Braves' nine-run rally in the eighth inning that erased a 2-0 Chicago lead.

Cleveland Indians blasted Kansas City out of first place in the American League West 10-4 and Oakland Athletics replaced the Royals in the top spot by defeating Boston Red Sox 6-3. San Francisco Giants shaded Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 in the National League in the only other major league game scheduled Thursday.

Aaron's homer was his first since July 31, which at the time put him 13 behind Ruth's record. "I'm happy to get off that 13," Aaron said. "I was beginning to get superstitious about it."

Aaron's homer also brought him to within one of Stan Musial's extra-base-hit record of 1,377.

For the unhappy Cubs, who only a month ago were leading the National League East with a won-lost record of 50-42, manager Whitey Lockman said: "There doesn't seem to be any lineup change left to make."

Kansas City had beaten Cleveland nine straight times this season, but this time it was the Indians' turn. They unleashed a 16-hit attack.

Finals for Superstars Hit Schedule Conflict

ROTONDA WEST, Fla. (AP) — A schedule conflict in February developed for Superstars promoters Wednesday when some of the semi-final qualifiers turned out to be winter sports stars.

John Havlicek of Boston Celtics and Jim McMillian of Los Angeles Lakers, who finished second and third in their division to qualify for the finals, will be in the middle of their National Basketball Association season in February.

Yvan Cournoyer of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League finished third in his division and will be in a similar situation. In addition, Dutch speed skater Ard Schenk, who won Cournoyer's division, and Austrian skier Karl Schranz, who finished second, will be in the midst of their seasons.

Schenk and pole vaulter Bob Seagren each claimed $10,000 as division winners. Seagren went home with a total of $15,150 on the basis of $100 for each of his 51½ points and Schenk earned $15,250 on 52½ points.

Second place was worth $5,000 and third $2,500. All 24 athletes, divided into 12-man divisions, were guaranteed $1,000.

Schenk won both final events Wednesday with times of 30.31 seconds in the obstacle course to 33.40 for figure skater John (Misha) Petkevich and with 2:31.65 in the mile bicycle race to 2:34.39 for skier Spider Sabich.

Seagren, who won the first Superstars last February and claimed $40,000, finished first in the 90-yard obstacle course in his division with a time of 24.07 seconds to 24.28 for runner Lee Evans. McMillian won the bicycle race in 2:39.06 to 2:39.28 for runnerup distance runner Jim Ryun.

Other point totals in Division One were Havlicek 35, McMillian 32, shot putter Brian Oldfield 29, basketball's Billy Cunningham 26½, Evans 23, basketball's Nate Archibald 16, swimmer Don Schollander 14½, Ryun 9, swimmer Mike Burton 2½, hydroplane racer Bill Muncey 1 and motorcyclist Gene Romero 0.

Eagles Boost Playoff Lead

Flay Hall hammered a grand slam home run in the eighth inning Thursday night to help give Eagles a 10-6 win over Castaways and a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven Industrial Men's Softball League playoff final series at Macdonald Park.

It was the second straight game in which Hall has driven in the winning run. The series continued Monday at 6:30 p.m. on the same site.

'Silent Service' Survives Politics

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

There's still a "silent service" in Canada even though political manipulation at the highest level has taken away our navy in favor of a "sea element."

As a matter of fact, the incident was spilled by an officer cadet who's not been around long enough to really understand the tight-lipped tradition of our tars.

It was Wednesday night when west-sou'westerlies of 35 knots had caused chaos in Cadboro Bay, where only the sturdy Cal 20s and some daredevil Laser skippers had managed to complete series racing with the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

The Oriole was in Haro Strait, doing some night sailing in the vicinity of Turn Point.

She was hailed by an Erickson 23 from Oregon with five people aboard — a man and his wife, two teenage daughters and a six-year-old son.

My informant tells me, "It was kind of windy at the time and there were bad swells."

"We came about under sail, then downed sail and came alongside the boat," the cadet reports.

The Oregon skipper admitted he was completely lost and the Oriole took the craft under tow, bringing her safely in to the RVYC base at Cadboro Bay about midnight.

Two RVYC juniors will be trying to pull off a big one this weekend.

Skipper Tim Roots and Jeff McBride will be competing in the western 16-and-under-championships on Glenmore Lake in Calgary. The seven race series will be sailed in Flying Juniors.

There'll be a total of 10 cerws bidding for top spot. Three are from British Co-lulmbia, three from Alberta, two from Saskatchewan and two from Manitoba.

At Cadboro Bay, RVYC boats will race another in the around-Discovery-Island series on Saturday with the first boats getting their start gun at 1 p.m. The race will be run on a reverse handicap system.

On Sunday, keel boats of the club will compete in a 26-miler acorss the Strait of Juan de Fuca to the U.S. navy buoy and back. Start time is 10 a.m. in the Gonzales area.

Boats have to be equipped for Catergory 11 offshore racing. There will be two classes — International Offshore Rule and Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet.

The end of the Fastnet race — longest of the four races for the coveted Admiral's Cup — was a bit of a heart break this week for those aboard the top United States challenger Charisma.

While she lay in irons, the Brazilian boat Saga kept moving, making up an estimated 20 miles during the night to overhaul the American boat and become first America's Cup contender over the finish line of the 605-mile classic.

Sorcery, a U.S. 61-footer was first boat home in the Fastnet but she was not an Admiral's Cup contender because she exceeds the 60-foot limit set by the Cup organizers.

A total of 48 Admiral's Cup competitors were in the Fastnet, plus another 250 that couldn't meet Cup requirements.

The Cup race committee announced today that West Germany had won the Admiral's Cup with a total of 831 points, followed by Australia with 779 points. Britain was in third spot with 752 points, beating out the United States with 738.

Big Vancouver Tax Windfall

VANCOUBER (CP) — Taxpayers here will begin making twice-a-year payments to city hall in 1975 under a plan approved Thursday by the finance and administration committee.

Financing director Peter Leckie estimated establishment of the new system would cost $150,000, but mean a $1.5 million windfall under current interest rates.

The $150,000 cost is related to designing a new tax billing system, making more extensive use of computers.

The city would invest the taxes it got five months early and the result would be between nearly $1 million and $1.5 million, depending on the existing interest ates, Leckie said.

He admitted that commercial and industrial firms would suffer because they would be deprived of money they could invest but said the majority of single-family homeowners would benefit because most pay their taxes with their monthly mortgage payments or with loose cash.

These taxpayers would save as the city government realizes the substantial windfall, Leckie added.

ROSSLAND (CP) — The weekly Kootenay Miner, first published in 1895 in British Columbia, printed its final edition Thursday.

Ruling Over MD Coming

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons will likely decide (next month) what measures to take against a Grand Forks doctor guilty of unprofessional conduct, the college's deputy registrar said Thursday.

Mr. Justice K. E. Meredith ruled Wednesday that Dr. Salaruddin Ahmad, 41, acted unprofessionally but not infamously when he made $5,000 more a year than the average doctor in the same class.

The college originally charged Dr. Ahmad with "infamous and unprofessional conduct" for giving 16 patients excessive, but profitable, treatment between April 1, 1970, and March 31, 1972.

The college charged this "overservicing" was unnecessary. Dr. Ahmad said it was justified for medical reasons and appealed to the B.C. supreme court.

Grape Hearing Set Monday

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court will hear an application Monday from an import firm which wants a local boycott against handling California grapes stopped.

A Slade and Stewart Ltd. lawyer said Thursday the injunction was applied for because the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union is following a B.C. Federation of Labor declaration that California grapes are "hot."

DRUG MART MAN SLAMS BOYCOTT

VANCOUVER (CP) — All 64 Shoppers Drug Mart franchise outlets in B.C. are suffering under a labor boycott although there is a strike at only nine, the president of Cunningham Drug Stores Ltd. said today.

"In some instances we are not able to supply critical prescription drugs to regular customers since the boycott has depleted supplies from wholesalers," said David H. Macdonald.

Supplies at outlets not directly involved in the strike have been depleted and "some are out entirely, causing trouble for a tremendous number of people," he said.

The Shoppers Drug Mart stores operate under a franchise arrangement with Koffler Stores Ltd. of Toronto, which acquired control of Cunningham Drug Stores two years ago.

Macdonald criticized the B.C. Federation of Labor for defying a majority decision of the B.C. Appeal Court ordering an end to the boycott first called by the federation June 18.

The court granted shoppers stores an injunction Aug. 7 calling for an end to the boycott but the federation announced Wednesday its "hot" declaration "remains in full force and effect."

Macdonald said the federation was conducting an "illegal" boycott now and accused its leaders of "quite publicly thumbing their noses at the courts."

An Answer to Equality —The Washer and Dryer

Item: A call today from one of our town's most militant women liberationists, asking me belligerently why I'd not done an article on the emergence of that movement in Japan.

Fact is, I had to tell her, that while there's a small, vocal group of Japanese women seeking "equality" and "a North American status" for their sex, it remains the last of the developed nations in which women are content with a traditional role.

Since my last visit of 18 years ago I noticed a tremendous increase in the numbers of women in offices, particularly in the civil service where some even have executive jobs. But at the housewife level there's been very little change. Only the young marrieds go out to dinner or a show together. It's rare, indeed, to find a husband of five years' duration who doesn't lead his own social life, very often involving hanky-panky.

The explanation, like everything else in Japan, is to be found in affluence. It is only over the last 10 years that the average housewife has enjoyed the goodies of the Appliance Age, the washer and dryer, the dish-washer, the all-electric kitchen, not to mention a household budget that has made shopping a new-found joy.

Japanese women are today, I would guess, about where North American women were a quarter of a century ago. Only when the thrill of labor-saving devices and gadgets wears off will they start rocking the domestic boat.

Item: To making a date with the dentist today and I'm reminded again that there's no wider manifestation of the generation gap.

I am of that vintage that had good cause to fear and hate the chair and, in fact, go right back to "Painless" Parker who, single-handedly, must have caused more sheer agony to the human race than any other man. For at least 30 years I never had a dentist who didn't cause me a whole lot of naked pain, who didn't prefix his calisthenics with the warning that "This is going to hurt."

Ah, but my darlin' daughters have grown up with the high-speed drill, with "freezing" techniques that actually work and with dentists they look upon—incredibly!—as friends. And, of course, they are completely contemptuous of their old man's hang-ups, little knowing that it was the hang-up of an entire generation.

★ ★ ★

Item: An interesting post-script today to our notes on the subject of homosexuality in an article from The Medical Post noting the most recent views of the American Psychiatric Association members. Seems that what was once considered a crime or a disease—and now is considered neither—may no longer be classified as a "mental disorder."

The views of the association's vice-president, Dr. Judd Marmor, professor of psychiatry at the University of Southern California, indicate the depth of the re-examination that's now going on.

"Surely the time has come for psychiatry to give up the archaic practice of classifying the millions of men and women who accept or prefer homosexual object-choices as being, by virtue of that fact alone, mentally ill," he believes. "Psychiatrists do not have the right to so label behavior that is deviant from that currently favored by the majority."

A supporting view comes from Dr. Robert J. Stoller, a professor of psychiatry at the University of California in Los Angeles: "We cannot diagnose . . . homosexual behavior. There is too much variability in their styles of personality, and their reasons for seeking homosexual relations are too varied. Some homosexual syndromes, however, are beginning to be separated out, and in time we may be able to distinguish these clearly enough to have a dependable classification."

Such opinions fortify the only point I was trying to make in my own comment: That the layman must keep an open, tolerant mind, that ignorance and ridicule offer no solution to one of society's most pervasive problems.

Sweetener for the Sweet Life

Times Staff

Some are savoring the prospect of a "peaceful interlude" during a visitor-swamped summer.

"The real impact will be on those who don't live here and like to keep dashing over!"

Campbell said arrangements have been made to have a freight vehicle on the island and that islanders produce quite a bit of their own necessities.

He said the strike will rally community spirit:

"People with their own boats in the community will rally around and loan their boats to storekeepers.

Salt Spring Islander Marc Holmes quips:

Holmes agrees with Campbell that the respite from the heavy summer traffic could be enjoyable:

"Things have been booming here and, after all, we usually like to relax and go to sleep after Labor Day."

He says there are not too many people who commute from Salt Spring to Victoria for business and those who do don't face too many problems because of the strike.

"It's a short run from Vesuvius to Crofton for a private boat," he says. "We also have flying services of a sort and there's also Mike Stacey's water taxi service."

One of the two commuters contacted saw the strike as an opportunity to test whether he can forsake the city life entirely.

"We have all the necessities here," he said. "We have chickens, our own garden, oysters, clams, turkeys, the occasional crab and the fishing is excellent.

"I'm conducting business by phone. It (the strike) will give me an opportunity to see if I can stand on my own two feet rather than rely on the city."

"As far as we are concerned, we have no problems," he said. "We're arranging for the water taxi to take us to and from work as of Monday. We've arranged a car pool here and I have my car over at Swartz Bay on the other side."

The only islander to admit the strike could give him a headache is Stacey, who's operated a water taxi service for 10 years.

"We'll have to play it by ear," he said. "We're going to go out of our mind. We can't handle the whole thing."

He said he will operate his 22-foot gas boat from Ganges as usual and transfer his 30-foot diesel craft to Fulford.

"The small boat will be able to zip-zap wherever it's needed. We're going to be very flexible. We're not going to set up any scheduled runs."

Stacey said he will ferry B.C. Hydro and mill workers, as well as Farmer Construction men working on the extension of the local school.

★ ★ ★

Stacey said that, as in the strike of February 1968, his water taxis will be carrying mail between the Gulf Islands and Vancouver Island.

He suggests that tourists caught on the island should relax and enjoy it.

"If men have to go back to work they don't have to take the whole family. The husband should go and Mom could stay on.

FIRE BAN ENDS

Campfire restrictions were removed from Vancouver Island today as rain showers eased the hazard of forest fires.

The B.C. Forest Service said there were no known blazes on the Island at this time.

The hazard has been considerably reduced by rain across the Island Thursday and this morning.

Forest industry operations may be resumed, although many of the camps are closed for vacations.

In the Nelson area, 10 persons who ignored a campfire ban have been charged. They face fines up to $500 if found guilty, although the usual penalty is in the range of $75 to $100 for the offence.

In addition, a man has been charged with arson in connection with a fire near Nelson. His name was not released.

The cost of fighting fires so far this year is $5.2 million, compared with $1.7 million at the same time in 1972.

Reason for the increased cost is greater use of the 42 planes available to drop water on forest blazes.

There has been a 50 per cent increase in the number of fires to date, 2,135 compared to 1,484 at the same time in 1972.

Housing Prices Peak

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Resistance to 10 Per Cent Mortgage Grows

Housing prices have just about reached their peak for the year as resistance grows to 10 per cent mortgage rates, Greater Victoria Real Estate Board president Eric Charman said today.

Prices for expensive homes should remain at about their present levels while lower priced houses may record minor increases.

"The demand for homes is still very strong but the cost of borrowing money has gone too high and there is some resistance," he said.

"However, the great increases in house prices we have been experiencing couldn't possibly have been maintained in any case."

Victoria realtor D. F. Hanley agreed with Charman's assessment of the market, adding that he expected current prices to hold until the end of the year.

Hanley said a new upward surge of housing prices could be expected early in 1974 because the federal government would have to ease up on the money supply during the winter to combat unemployment.

Both blamed the 10 per cent mortgage rate and the cutback in the supply of funds as the main reason for the cooling off of the housing market.

Housing values, which had been stable for three years, began shooting upwards in November, 1972, and by May, 1973, had risen an average of 12 per cent in Victoria.

During that six-month period, some good homes in desirable locations had risen 30 per cent in value, while some others in less attractive areas had risen as little as 5 per cent.

During June and July, prices continued to rise, but only moderate amounts.

By mid-August the upward movement of prices seemed to come to a virtual halt.

An official of Block Bros. said vendors were still listing their homes at higher prices but were no longer making instant sales at those prices.

He said a very strong resistance appeared to be growing against increased prices, although there was no sign of a decline.

The Greater Vancouver Real Estate Board reported the average home sale during July was $39,349, up more than $4,000 from the $35,141 at the end of June.

These statistics included all residential sales, including lots and duplexes, but excluding apartments and commercial property.

The board said that averages must always be treated cautiously because a few high-priced homes could distort the picture, but housing values were definitely rising strongly in July.

The market was still fairly brisk in August, although resistance was growing to the 10 per cent mortgage rate.

Victoria has no comparable housing price index.

The Canadian board said the average selling price of all real estate in British Columbia during the first six months of 1973 was $29,545, up 18.3 per cent in six months.

This compares with a Canadian average of $30,000, up 14.7 per cent. The figures include lots, houses, and apartments.

During the six months, the average MLS price in Victoria rose to $29,950, up 20.4 per cent.

Vancouver's average rose 28.9 per cent to $38,562 and Toronto's average climbed 23.6 per cent to $41,264.

The Canadian Real Estate Association figures showed average MLS prices rising faster in the first quarter (13 per cent) than in the second quarter (3.5 per cent). House prices did not rise as quickly as lot prices, which are included in the figures.

Meanwhile, Central Mortgage and Housing, which makes money available for low-cost housing, has increased its rates to 9.5 per cent from 8.75 per cent, effective immediately.

Conventional mortgage rates in Victoria are 10 per cent, although in rare cases some 9.75 per cent mortgage money can be obtained.

Most of the nearly $540 million loaned by CMHC in 1972 went to low-rent units and homes for moderate income families.

Mom Bears Twins, Dad Goes to Jail

Hours after his wife gave birth to twins, John Glendon Flett today was sentenced to five years in jail for robbing a gas station at gunpoint.

"This should have been a day of congratulations for you — a joyous day for a man and his wife, but now it is only one of pain," Judge William Ostler told Flett in Victoria provincial court.

Flett was charged with the armed robbery of a Union 76 service station July 19.

Police said Flett entered the gas station with a silk stocking over his head and a .38-calibre revolver in his hand and demanded the attendant give him all the money in the till, a total of $35.

Ostler told Flett to change "the whole pattern of your life for the sake of your children and your wife.

"The birth of these twins gives you a reason to effect a profound change that is essential to your life.

"The future of your wife and children is in your hands."

On two charges of breach of probation, Flett was sentenced to three months in jail, to be served concurrently with the five-year sentence.

Witness Sought

A Victoria woman known only as "Mrs. English" is sought by the RCMP to aid investigation of a fatal highway crash near Williams Lake July 19.

The woman was witness to a sideswipe on Highway 97 in which one car continued for a mile before plunging into a ditch and rolling over, killing a male passenger.

SKYLINE PROFILE of workmen atop the extension of Nootka Court at the corner of Douglas and Humboldt today presented a shadowy effect under a darkening sky. # Visitor Charged With Murder Bid

A Kingcome Inlet man has been released from jail on $8,000 bail after he was charged with the attempted murder of a Victoria city policeman and another man Thursday night.

Frank Joseph, also known as Frederick P. Vasquez, appeared in Victoria provincial court today and was remanded until Sept. 7 for a preliminary hearing.

Police said Larry Howard Caton, 1312 Government Street, was shot in the shoulder at 11:40 p.m., Thursday, outside the Century Inn beer parlor.

Three shots were fired at Caton, police said — the first missed, the second struck him in the right shoulder and the third missed, too.

Caton was rushed to Victoria General Hospital and later released.

Const. Kevin McLaughin, patrolling nearby, heard the three shots and ran towards the beer parlor.

A man turned a .38-calibre Smith and Wesson revolver towards the policeman and fired two shots. Both missed.

McLaughlin wrestled the man to the ground and kept him there by standing on his hair until police reinforcements arrived.

McLaughlin said in an interview that it was the first time in his three years on the police force that he had drawn his gun.

Police Subdue Man With Axe

Police said a middle-aged man with a logger's axe was taken into custody at 10 a.m. after he was wielding the weapon on a car lot on Yates Street.

William Arthur Conley appeared in Victoria provincial court later in the morning in connection with the incident, screaming that he was "a very excited and upset gentleman."

Conley was told by Judge William Ostler there was no reason for him to be upset, and Conley replied, 'What's good for the spider is bad for the fly."

Ostler remanded the case until later today so Conley could speak to a doctor.

Yelling that he wanted the whole world to hear and calling the judge names, Conley was led out of court.

Sewer Hearing 90% Favored

A View Royal petition requesting public hearings on the question of sewer expansion has been 90 per cent favorable, one of its organizers said today.

In a low-key campaign in which only genuinely interested persons were asked to respond, 57 households were canvassed and 73 persons signed in support of hearings.

John White, 309 View Royal, said the petition "probably reflects a majority opinion" indicating that a "significant and widely spread body of residents are aware of the profound effect the installation of major services could have."

He said they are anxious to be informed on all related matters, including cost, sharing arrangements, jurisdiction, planning and zoning before Capital Regional District decisions are made.

The petition was sent to Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer, and copies have gone to the premier, health minister, community associations, health and regional boards.

BOAT LEAPFROGS TRUCK

Two men were injured in Colwood Thursday afternoon when a boat they were towing leap-frogged their pickup truck after a collision with a runaway trailer.

Gerald Greenhall, of 1206 Old Esquimalt Road, the driver of the pick-up, and Bruce Lockhart, of 415 Raynor Ave., were taken to Victoria General Hospital.

Greenhall had chest and back injuries and Lockhart eye and face cuts.

Colwood RCMP said the accident occurred when a trailer broke loose from a flatbed truck being driven across Parson's Bridge by Gordon Truden, 571 Hallsor Drive.

The trailer veered into an abutment, and bounced on to the hood of the pickup truck towing the boat.

Foot Problems Sidestepped

I read that many of our people in America have serious discomforts because of troubles in their feet, but we doctors seldom concern ourselves with such troubles. As Dr. John Calabro recently said, "Two hundred million North Americans have foot problems and yet most doctors never bother to have their patient remove his shoes and socks. The foot is the most neglected part of the body in terms of general medical care."

Fortunately, today there are podiatrists who spend their lives studying such problems and helping such people. Every so often when I get much pain in my feet, I go to a good podiatrist who immediately gives me relief. Once, when I went to a huge nursing home to visit, the manager, who was showing me around, introduced me to the podiatrist, saying that he was the most-loved man in the institution because so many of the elderly patients have painful feet and they receive much comfort and relief from the podiatrist.

Calabro said that there are several precautions that people can follow in order to keep their feet comfortable; if they have gained too much weight, they should make a big effort to lose it, and also they should avoid the extreme kind of shoes that are fashionable today.

Interestingly, Calabro says that it is best for the feet if the person goes barefoot or wears sandals. However, for people who prefer to wear shoes, the shoes should be comfortable, should have good einside supports, and should not push the feet out of shape.

SAME-DAY SERVICE

Since about 1961, a number of hospitals have been admitting thousands of patients in the morning, having a surgeon operate, often with some local anesthesia, and letting the patient go home, perhaps four hours after the operation. The most commonly performed operations in these one-day outpatient surgical service departments include gynecological, urological, plastic, orthopedic, and dental procedures, where no complications are anticipated following the operation.

More and more hospitals are now giving this service, and the patients are grateful because their expense is lessened by one-third; also a mother of children can return home early enough so that she won't have to have an evening or night babysitter.

At Washington, D.C.'s, George Washington University Hospital, since their unit opened in 1966, more than 14,000 patients have undergone outpatient surgery and left the same day. About half of these received a general anesthetic and were able to return home three to five hours later. They are allowed to leave when they can go safely while accompanied by a responsible adult.

The hospitals are pleased because more rooms are left available for patients so ill that they must stay in the place for days or weeks. I read that more and more, hospitals are now arranging to give people this one-day service.

Hobby of Lifetime Hooks Fisherman

It started some years ago, when Chester Bacon, his wife Sadie, and a couple of friends set off for Campbell River to do some fishing.

The fish weren't biting. So, to pass the time, Bacon went for a hike in the forest. There he began picking up odd shaped pieces of wood. So many, in fact, he returned to Victoria with a car load.

Looking back to that day when he carried those pieces into his basement, Bacon remembers he immediately began adapting what tools he had on hand in order to do some wood carving.

First thing he made was a bowl from a good-size fir burl. Next came a chair from a fir stump and a stool from a stump that had grown a covering of sorts, over the gaping hole left when the tree was cut down.

"You find stumps like that amongst the firs," Bacon says, "especially if two trees stand close together and their roots have intertwined. Then, if one is cut, the other feeds the stump enough to allow it to grow a sort of lid."

As he became more expert, Bacon experimented with parquet work — fitting small pieces of wood into geometric patterns. There's a coffee table in his home today that is a fine example of his skill.

He made table lamps, telephone stands and chairs and picture frames. And he used not only fir but cedar and pitchwood. "You find that last amongst the firs, too," he says, "right down among the stumps."

All this necessitated more and more woods. So he went hunting along the beaches and wherever there was a good stand of trees.

"Best piece I ever found was out at the Esquimalt Lagoon," he tells you with a reminiscent smile. "A cedar log, six-by-four and about five feet high. It floated in to the edge of the sand and it took two trucks with cable and a loader to get it up and deliver it to my basement."

Today, Chester Bacon has practically given up carving and shaping "the big pieces." Instead he is concentrating on making jewelry from such woods as juniper, acacia, laburnum and Tree of Heaven.

That last, he will tell you, is "very hard to find." He knows of only 20 such trees in Victoria.

First, to get a mixture of natural tones, Bacon glues difference pieces of wood together in small oblong blocks. These are cut to size, the corners are rounded, the tiny pieces shaped and holes bored through the middle. Then the beads are either left in their natural tones or colored.

He uses a minimum of machine tools to fashion his attractive pieces.

There's a motor, a mandrill, a jig, as he calls it, to bore holes in the beads, a few different sized saws and a "chuck" to hold bits.

Right now, he is also experimenting with a blow torch to touch up the various pieces and to give them a more exotic look.

Coloring is done with vegetable dyes. "Every piece comes out differently. The softer woods take more color and when dyed have an almost irridescent look. Hard woods do not absorb as much color."

Over the years since he turned that first fir burl into a bowl Chester Bacon has become an expert in creating beauty from natural woods.

In 1967 he received the Dr. G. H. Young shield for excellence of design and use of a medium, at the Pacific National Exhibition hobby craft show.

BACON . . . switches to jewelry

His home at 1114 Dallas Road is filled with furniture he has made. There is also a showroom where the walls are utilized to display his original hand-made wood jewelry.

These include brooches, earrings, necklets, bracelets, tie clips, bola ties and many other pieces; also a collection of pieces in which the natural grains of the woods have formed pictures of birds, flowers and sometimes — scenes.

"I came across these every once in awhile and each time it amazes me how truth they are in outline," he says, "all they need is a bit of cutting and polishing and you have an amazing piece."

Chester Bacon has a name for his creations — Burlcraft. And on his cards appears a bit of verse that gives a glimpse of the man behind the medium in which he works:

"For lo, behold, the beauty now we see.

Invasion of Privacy Could Be Expensive

DEAR ABBY: Since the beginning of our marriage four years ago, I told my husband I wouldn't tolerate "Playboy" or any other such magaine in our home, and if he wanted to read that kind of stuff he would have to leave it at his office.

We moved recently and I found a stack of these girlie magazines in the attic. My husband laughed about it and said he read them when I was asleep or out.

Now he continues buying these magazines which he keeps in his drawer. I told him to remove them or I would throw them out. Well, he didn't, and I did. Now he tells me I owe him $8 for his destroyed magazines, and he refused to give me his paycheck until I pay him the $8.

Am I wrong, or is he? He knew my feelings, and he was warned. He says those magazines belonged to him and I had no right to destroy them.

If you want to publish this, go ahead. There must be others with this problem.—Hates Filth.

DEAR HATES: You are wrong. You husband has a right to read what he wishes, and to keep whatever he wants in his drawer. And if you don't quit invading his privacy and destroying his property, it could cost you more than $8.

DEAR ABBY: Both my husband and I are nearly 30 years old. We've been married for six beautiful years, and we have not had any children because we just plain do not want any. We have given the matter a great deal of serious consideration and have concluded that having children is not all it's cracked up to be. Maybe we're wrong, but that is the way we feel about it.

The problem: Both his mother and mine have been hounding us for some time now with: "When are you going to make me a "grandmother?" The answer of course, is: "Never!" But how do you tell two women who have done little else in their lives but produce children without inviting a fight?

We have been told that we are "selfish," that it's "unnatural" to want no children, and maybe we should see a psychiatrist. I'm sure you get the picture.

So how do you tell two would-be grandmothers that whether we want children or not is strictly our own business, and even though it's a disappointment to them, we would rather not discuss it?—Childless and Satisfied.

DEAR CHILDLESS: You seem sufficiently articulate to get the message across. When the subject comes up, simply say that you prefer not to discuss it. And don't try to defend your position or you will be in for an endless debate.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old divorced woman. No children. I have some vacation time coming and want to go to Europe with a friend of mine. He is a very nice person. We are just good friends, with no romantic involvement. In fact, he has no interest in women. He and his roommate (another fellow) just broke up after a two-year relationship.

This fellow would pay his own way and I would pay mine. We both like museums and art galleries, and I am sure we would have a great time together.

If either one of us met someone attractive on the trip, the other would understand, and we could go our separate ways of an evening.

My mother thinks I am out of my mind, Abby. She says for me to go on a trip with this fellow would be bad for my reputation, and it would "disgrace" her.

How do you feel about it? — Only A Friend.

DEAR ONLY: What's "disgraceful" about good friends vacationing together? You're an adult. Do as you please.

As an average Canadian, you are using a pound of paper every day. This pound may be in the form of newspapers, tea bags, dollar bills, wallpaper, containers and facial tissues.

The illustrated 16-page booklet About Pulp and Paper discusses the history of paper, its production, its varied uses and the immense importance of the pulp and paper industry for Canada's economy.

The Chinese knew how to make paper almost 2,000 years ago. In Canada, paper making from rags started in 1805 in a mill near Lachute in Quebec. The first Canadian mill which produced paper from wood started manufacture in 1864.

Today there are about 140 paper mills across the country. Their annual output is valued at over $2 billion. More than three quarters of the production is exported.

The booklet explains every step of the paper-making process. It also points out that newsprint is the industry's leading product. Less than ten per cent of the total newsprint production is used in Canada. The rest is sold to over 40 countries around the world. Besides newsprint, Canadian paper mills produce over 500 different kinds of fine papers.

Equality of Teachers Up to the Individual

family

TORONTO (CP) — If women teachers want true equality with men in their profession, they must change their own attitudes, says Sybil Shack of Winnipeg.

Shack is a school principal and author of the Two-Thirds Majority; Women in Canadian Education.

She was speaking today to 800 delegates to the annual meeting of the Federation of Women Teachers' Associations of Ontario representing 33,000 members.

Shack said two-thirds of the profession are women and practically none are principals, superintendents, inspectors or in any position to have a voice in basic educational policy making.

"Part of it rests in bias. Women are not expected to be ambitious, and we're resented when we do get leadership roles."

But she said she has tried to talk women teachers into assorted leadership roles in the profession, and has been turned down. She said women teachers lack confidence and ambition, and are unwilling to commit themselves to involvement that means extra work.

She urged the women teachers to sell people on what should be a self-evident fact, that they are as capable as men of doing the jobs offered by their profession.

Federation president Leonore Graham of Windsor reiterated the organization's response to an Ontario government paper tabled in June on equal opportunity for women. She said it is too tentative and had no price tags attached to pay for some of the suggestions made in it.

"There was the greatest temptation to say, 'there we go again.' There was nothing radical in any of the prospects, so what is there to discuss?

"One of the clues to how serious this government is will be the amount of money they are prepared to spend in the cause of justice."

After her speech, delegates unanimously endorsed a bill of rights for women teachers presented by Mrs. Graham during Tuesday evening's opening session.

It says teachers should be employed and promoted on the basis of merit, not of sex or marital status, that women should have salary and benefits, including pensions, that are the same as their male colleagues. It says women teachers should have the same benefits, including maternity leave, as a guaranteed law to other women workers.

The bill will be sent to the provincial minister of education and to all Ontario school boards.

It's Not ALL Bad

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Take heart parents — not all back-to-school news is bad this year.

Clothes, shoes and lunchmeat are all up but school supplies are almost the same price as a year ago, according to local stationers.

Next year could be a different story, however, as paper stock moves up. One store reports a current increase of 5-10 per cent over 1972, making looseleaf paper and scribblers higher.

But the other regularly-listed school supplies such as pencils, erasers, glue and rulers are little changed.

Classroom dictionaries can still be bought for less than $1 and range to $3.95 at a major supply house.

By comparison, a pair of shoes that cost $8 last year may cost $12 now.

A department store said school supplies were ordered in such quantity and early enough that any factory increases will not be felt at the retail level this year.

About the only other significant difference noted in the lists of required supplies put out by school districts is the addition of metric scale to the conventional 12-inch ruler.

This move is designed to make children familiar with metric measure to which Canada will swing shortly,

Most stores carry supplies in open stock, according to the authorized lists, to avoid any confusion regarding quantity and quality of contents.

Stocks are plentiful, selections good, but one store checked Wednesday had no one but clerks in the school supplies department.

Marital Status, Sex Unwanted in Policies

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal human rights commission and elimination of references to sex and marital status from federal employees' insurance and pension plans are sought by the Canadian Federation of University Women (CFUW) which begins its five-day triennial conference here today.

Both items are contained in resolutions to be presented to the meeting.

The 11,000-member federation, which has 120 affiliates, will also examine a proposal urging more federal promotion of employment opportunities for women in both the public and private sectors and another to increase family allowances.

Cabinet Only 'Golda Plated'

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — With a woman prime minister, Israel might be expected to have complete equality of the sexes. But things are not exactly that way.

Prime Minister Golda Meir is the only woman in the 15-member cabinet. In a Parliament of 120 members, there are eight women. There are no women on the Supreme Court or at the top of the military hierarchy.

Many women here feel that they have played a diminishing role in the last 25 years.

During the early days of the new country, up to and including Israel's struggle for independence, women worked alongside men. They helped set up villages in malaria-infested swamps. They smuggled arms for the underground. They shared in decisions during crucial political periods.

If there was a turning point in this state of affairs, it came after 1948, when Israel became a country.

Esther Herlitz, a former ambassador, is among those who feel that women today in Israel lag far behind men, especially in politics.

Herlitz, who as ambassador to Denmark was a senior diplomat, now is running for a seat in the Knesset Parliament in the elections scheduled for Oct. 30.

She supports demands by some members of the Labor party for women to be guaranteed at least 25 per cent of the party's representation in Parliament.

But Herlitz admits that young women have little interest in political careers.

Of the dozen parties with representation in the outgoing Knesset, only three have women parliamentarians.

In other fields, Israeli women have made great strides.

In he Weizman Institute of Technology and the Hebrew University, women have reached the top of the ladder in such fields as nuclear physics, cybernetics or construction technology.

Even more prominent is the role played by women in the legal profession. A visit to the busy courthouse in Tel Aviv can show dozens of women lawyers in black robes, both prosecuting and defending.

Exchange Brings Gripes

TORONTO (CP) — A group of private school children who went to France this summer to brush up on their French returned with some complaints about the food and general communications with their counterparts there.

The 32 children, aged six to 14, are students at the Toronto French School. Their three-week trip was to a French government-subsidized summer camp near Fillinges in the French Alps.

"The food was terrible," said Ross Mesurier, 13, whose main complaint concerned the lack of beef and that the horsemeat substitute usually was cooked too rare.

The Canadian students are required to speak French in the corridors and gymnasium as well as in the classrooms at their Toronto school, but some found the total immersion at the French camp difficult.

Peter Perlus and Emily Rybczynski, 10, said the French youngsters, whose second language is German, tended to keep to themselves.

"There wasn't much mixing, perhaps because the French group arrived at the camp four days before us and considered us to be the invaders," Emile said.

Her mother, Vivia Rybczynski, visited the camp and said the daily routine seemed "monotonous."

"Hiking was one of the main activities and I think the children tired of that in a hurry," she said.

Pascal Gelve, a Toronto French School teacher who accompanied the students, said the Canadian children experienced a "cultural conflict."

"They expected too much from the camp," he said. "We were the visitors and therefore it was up to us to approach the French children."

School officials organized the trip to France rather than to Quebec out of concern for the "constant erosion" of the French language in Quebec, a school spokesman said.

Hard Labor Done Free For Colombia Orphans

TORONTO (CP) — More than a dozen young Canadians gave up summer jobs and $500 each this year in exchange for 18 days of hard labor to help homeless children in Bogota.

The volunteers, 16 in all, were members of a pilot scheme sponsored by World Vision of Canada, a non-denominational agency that purchased a farm earlier this year to house 100 orphans.

The Canadian volunteers, aged 15 to 20, spent their time clearing land and painting and repairing the farm house.

"The whole thing was worthwhile and really broadened my ideas," said 17-year-old Marion Quinn of Toronto on her return here.

Quinn, who gave up a summer receptionist's job at York University to take the trip, said she was so impressed with the work the agency is doing, she's considering making a career of it.

"I might go into full-time work of that sort," she said, "because it seems more worthwhile and satisfying even though the money's not that great."

Other young people on the trip echoed her sentiments.

Larry Sinardo, 20, also of Toronto, who plans to attend Bible college this fall, said he went on the trip to see what missionary work entails "and I'm glad to say I'm pleasantly surprised." Each of the volunteers paid the $500 air fare.

"I gained a lot," said Jim Thompson, 15, of Windsor, Ont. "It was a great experience having to adapt to another culture."

James Brown, director of administration for World Vision, said he was "tremendously enthused" with the project and plans to take more volunteers to the farm.

Housework Evaluated

BONN (Reuter) — The West German savings bank group has calculated that a husband would have to pay his wife the equivalent of $790 a month if all the work she does around the house was paid at market rates.

The three biggest items in the wage-list are: cleaning, $150, nursemaid, $125, and teacher, also $125.

The housewife's other jobs for which wage rates have been calculated include cooking, clerical accountancy, washerwoman, seamstress, handyman, gardener, nurse, waitress and home decorator.

The figures have been calculated for a woman with two children. Commenting on the statistical table, the savings bank group said husbands save a lot of money by marrying.

A Problem Researched On Scarlet Runners

The lack of pods setting on scarlet runner bean vines has been noted this summer. After the second question on the subject I thought it was time to review what could be remembered of this problem.

Bean seeds (with the exception of the Fava or Windsor Broad Bean, which belong to another genus) will rot very quickly if sown in cold wet soil. Thus if we sow the runners too early in the season we fail to get vines with the chance of an early set of pods.

To overcome this we can sow in early April using separate plant containers in a frost-free greenhouse. The young plants will be ready to set out as soon as frost is no longer a threat, about the end of May.

★ ★ ★

A sowing made outdoors here before the end of May in sandy light soil will also normally produce its first flowers by the beginning of July, resulting in pods by the month end.

A gap occurs in pollination in early August, according to an English research station, implying that a late sowing such as we frequently must resort to here during June, does not bear a crop until the second peak period. This occurs in late August.

The flowers though formed and open, meantime drop from the vines without being pollinated, leaving no pods developed.

The same research disclosed that bumble bees and honey bees were the main pollinating insects. These insects are known to like some weather conditions more than others, but this fact was not brought out in the article on the research.

Also discussed were the theories of artificial irrigation and water spraying of flowers to assist pollination. Neither influenced pod setting in the years when the control vines were dropping without podding.

Applying these facts to our conditions here, it would seem that in years when May sowing of runner beans is possible, and early warmth encourages bees to forage as the first flowers open, picking should be enjoyed by late July. Otherwise, the later crop of flowers, in August, will be the ones to be pollinated.

There was no explanation in the article why only the scarlet runner beans were researched, nor why bush, or French beans growing in the same garden area will set pods early and continuously while the runners drop their flowers without setting pods.

We wonder if the reason lies in the tropical origin of the scarlet runner, while the bush beans may be a sport or a hybrid with different constitution.

The bidding:

| East | South | West | North |
|---|---|---|---|
| 3 ♠ | Pass | Pass | Dbl. |
| Pass | 4 ♡ | Pass | Pass |
| Pass | | | |

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

The "normal" play would be as follows: West opens the ace of spades, after which he leads a diamond, dummy's king winning. The king and ace of trumps are then played, picking up West's trumps. Next comes the diamond ace, eliminating diamonds from both the North and South hands.

Re-entering the South hand via a trump, declarer now leads a club and puts up dummy's king. When this card wins the trick, a club is returned and South plays low on East's ten, hoping that West has been dealt the doubleton A-x. But East's ten captures the trick, after which East cashes the spade queen. In time, West's ace of clubs takes the setting trick.

The winning solution assumes two things, both of which are logical; (1) that West has the singleton ace of spades, and (2) that West has the club ace (with eight spades headed by the K-Q-10 and the ace of clubs, East would not have made a preemptive three-spade opening bid).

Here is how the contract can be fulfilled. After winning trick two with dummy's king of diamonds, declarer cashes the trump ace, dropping the seven from his own hand. Now the diamond ace is taken. Next the three of trumps is led, declarer following with the deuce as West is forced to win the trick with his five-spot.

If West now leads a diamond, declarer ruffs it in dummy as he discards a low club from his own hand. The club queen is then surrendered to West's ace, after which it becomes a simple matter to cash the club king and trump a third club, thereby establishing dummy's fourth club, upon which South discards his losing spade.

If, when West wins his trump five, he leads the club ace, declarer now has three club tricks. His losing spade is, again, discarded on the board's fourth club. And if West leads a low club instead of the ace, South wins the trick with his queen, after which he returns a club towards dummy's king. And, again, South makes three club tricks.

That's the way to play 'em, partner!

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Harry glanced at the envelope. "The 5-figure number? Lots of towns have them, and it must be on the north side of that street because it's even," he declared.

"Sure, Dad, but I don't mean that," replied Tony. "The number is exactly seven times what you get if you take the square of its last two digits."

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: Repeats was 1363975 (Parrot 681197, odd).

Divers End 'Death Trap' Search

FAIRHAVEN, Mass. (UPI) — A team of divers Thursday abandoned its month-long quest to recover $2 million in riches believed aboard the luxury liner Andrea Doria, which sank 17 year ago when it collided with the Swedish vessel Stockholm, killing 51 persons.

The recovery mission, which cost at least $250,000, was abruptly ended Thursday when a trio of divers who had managed to cut into the sunken vessel two days earlier found access to the ship's purser's office all but impossible.

"One long wall was badly buckled and there was a lot of wreckage in there — twisted steel and wooden beams," support diver Tim Kelley said. "We decided it was a death trap, and we weren't going in there."

Crewmen also said weather conditions were becoming increasingly dangerous.

Divers Chris Delucchi, and Donald Rodocker, both of San Diego, and photographer Bob Hollis remain in the habitat, affectionately known as "mother," undergoing decompression.

Before the search was abandoned, divers recovered some valuables, but crewmen refuse to detail what they are. Any booty may be subject to a court fight, and one crewman said there was a concern of "piracy" attempts on the trawler's return to Fairhaven.

No newsmen have been allowed aboard the Narragansett, and all reports on the progress of the expedition have been made over ship-to-shore radio.

Most of the $1.1 million in cash and nearly $1 million more in art objects, jewelry and other valuables, however, are believed located in four safes in the purser's office.

"Everybody was basically disappointed when we decided not to open the safes," Kelley said. "But when they realized what we accomplished with the (new diving) system, they felt a lot better about things."

The expedition employed a special "saturation diving" system, which enabled the divers to stay at the ocean bottom for an extended time living in the habitat and leaving it daily to search the Doria. Several previous salvage attempts, employing free diving, had failed.

Seattle Readies For Alaska Runs

SEATTLE (AP) — By next spring the Port of Seattle should have a terminal for use as a staging area for cargo destined to Alaska's North Slope oil fields, says a port official.

Eldon Opheim, port manager, said the port is the logical site for a multi-million dollar terminal for tug and barge operations destined for the Prudhoe Bay area.

Port commissioners have authorized an application for federal aid to finance the $2.6 million terminal and hope for a grant of one-half to one million dollars from the economic development administration.

Early Demolition Ordered for Homes

Early demolition of two dwellings was recommended Thursday by Victoria city council's fire prevention, health and welfare committee.

The committee endorsed staff reports urging that a frame house and outbuildings at 788-790 Hillside and a fire-damaged frame home at 204 Skinner be pulled down and removed.

The report on the Hillside property by public health, fire and building personnel said the premises owned by Bali Kudra, of 1364 Hillside, were inspected after reports that they were in an unsanitary and unsafe condition.

"It has been found that the complaints are fully justified and that the premises are unfit for human habitation," it added.

The report on the Skinner property, owned by Clifford Eshom, 416 Bidwell Place, said since the building was damaged in a fire in December, no attempt has been made to repair or remove it.

The property is described as an "eyesore" adjoining a main thoroughfare, and a "temptation and potential hazard for local children."

TED'S NUMBER UP

LONDON (UPI) — Puzzled tourists wandered up and down Downing Street looking in vain for Number 10, the home of British Prime Minister Heath.

Officials explained. The door, which has nothing else to distinguish it from other houses on the street, is being painted, and the number had been removed temporarily.

"We are sorry if it has caused any confusion," a government spokesman said.

They Still Come Up to See Mae at 81

HOLLYWOOD — She is 81 today and Mae West, who rose to fame as a sex star of the '30s with the invitation "Come up and see me some time," says: "They still come up and see me."

"I still get diamonds from young men aged 17, 18, 19 and 20," said the actress whose robust health is a Hollywood legend. "They write letters, I send them pictures and they still come up and see me."

Miss West said she has just completed a book called Sex Drive, the stories of her battles with censorship which led to the creation of the watchdog morals organization.

MYSTIC, Conn. — Actress Shelly Winters suffered minor facial injuries in an automobile accident Thursday. Police said she was injured when a car in which she was a passenger struck an obstacle in the road.

MOSCOW — Ernie, Bert, Mr. Hooper, the Cookie Monster and Big Bird, the characters of the Sesame Street television program, have been declared agents of neo-colonialism and imperialism by a Russian culture newspaper.

The popular children's television program, Sovietskaya Kultura said, is part of an American imperialist plot to reshape the minds of peoples in other countries and make them subservient to American aims.

BLOWING ROCK, N.C. — Harry Foster Welch, the voice of Popeye the Sailor Man for almost 40 years, died Thursday. He was 74.

Welch first began his association with the pipe-chomping, spinach-eating cartoon character in 1927 when he joined an acting ensemble to play the role of Popeye — then only a character in C. C. Segar's comic strip Thimble Theatre.

When animated cartoons of Popeye began in 1931, Segar got Welch to do the voices.

HYANNIS, Mass. — A lawyer for 21-year-old Joseph Kennedy says there may be a "full trial" Monday on charges that the son of the late Sen. Robert Kennedy was driving recklessly when three persons were hurt in a car crash on Nantucket this week.

LONDON (Reuter) — The slogan Make Love Not War has found a champion in an English family doctor.

"If every man and every woman had as much sex as they wanted there would be less fighting, cheating, twisting and other forms of evil in the world," says Dr. Brian Richards.

He says sex should be enjoyed for its own sake, like good food and music. And doctors, instead of "bleating and moralizing," should be looking for a remedy to VD.

NEW YORK — Freelance photographer Ronald Galella has sued actor Marlon Brando for $250,000, alleging that Brando hit him on the jaw while he was trying to photograph the actor in Chinatown.

Galella, soon after the incident last June 12, said Brando broke his lower jaw with a single punch and opened a facial cut that required nine stitches to close.

In court papers that became public Thursday, Galella asked $100,000 compensatory damages, plus $150,000 punitive damages.

A stereo concert from Austian Radio featuring the Johann Strauss Orchestra, conducted by Willi Boskovsky and introduced by Tony Thomas. This week, music by the three songs of Johann Strauss the elder, including Eduard's Blithe Spirit Waltz; My Life's Ambition is Love and Joy by Josef; and Lagoon Waltzes.

8:03 (AM) Between Ourselves. RCMP Eastern Arctic Patrol: The story of the establishment of the RNWP (which became the RCMP in 1920) in the eastern Arctic, produced by Les McLaughlin of CBC Northern Service. The first detachment was established at Cape Fullerton in 1904, a favourtie wintering place for American and sometimes Scottish whaling ships. The program is largely anecdotal—tales of murder, pursuit, heroism in the face of overwhelming odds, of mercy towards the sick and dying. Members of the force tell their own thrilling stories of the early days.

9:03 (FM) The Bush and the Salon. Echoes to the Land of Plenty, by Monica Mugan. The program follows the adventures of two British immigrants—Eli Marefield from East Doreset and Paddy Mahoney from County Clare—who arrived here between 1840 and 1875, a time of heavy migration to the colonies. The Canadian government gave aid to healthy immigrants, including free passage inland.

10:03 (FM) Ideas. A Choice of Futures—Japan: Japan has achieved a high level of economic growth within a remarkably short time. This accelerated pattern of development has also entrained critical environmental deterioration at great cost to the Japanese people. Indeed, the situation in Japan has reached a crisis level with some scientists predicting collapse within 30 years at present rates unless radical solutions are found. One of these is Dr. Jun Ui, Research Fellow of the Dept. of Urban Engineering, University of Tokyo. Interviewed in Stockholm, where he was a delegate to the Dai Dong alternate conference on the environment, Dr. Ui presents some of the gloomy details of the Japanese environment and traces the cultural roots and political implications of the crisis.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY
This is the way it's done. You buy an old revenue bearing house for close to the value of the lot. Your money earns anywhere from 10% to 13%. As the house depreciates the land appreciates. When the land value equals more than your total investment you sell. The man to handle this for you is Don Bacon, Byron Price and Associates Ltd. You find him at 804 Broughton St., or by dialing 385-2458. And you laugh all the way to the bank.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc, for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

Dockers Defy Ruling

VANCOUVER (CP) — Docks here were only in partial operation Thursday and early today as longshore workers continue to defy a court injunction ordering them back to work.

No workers were dispatched Thursday for the 5 p.m. and 1 a.m. shifts and a union spokesman said he doesn't expect any change today.

The British Columbia Maritime Employers' Association obtained an injunction Thursday from Mr. Justice J. S. Aikins instructing officials of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union to order the men to work.

About 1,200 workers refused Thursday afternoon to make themselves available to be dispatched to the White Pass and Yukon route terminal in North Vancouver, so defying the injunction and the union executive.

The dispute is over the grievance prodedure for five workers who were dispatched to work at White Pass June 22.

The men claimed they were not warned they would be shovelling salt and did not receive a protective-clothing notification.

The five refused to work and the dispute went to an adjudicator.

His ruling was interpreted differently by the two sides.

The men's names were put forward again to work Wednesday for White Pass and they were refused.

Other workers then refused to work White Pass and the union claimed the employers closed down the whole dispatch.

It's the Thought . . .

EDMONTON (CP) — Even though the geography was a little off, it was the thought that counted.

City council this week received a letter from the city of Fredericton congratuating Edmonton for holding "the senior baseball games."

The only problem is that the senior baseball championships will be held next week in Edmundston, N.B.

EDMONTON (CP) — A $280,000 grant was approved by the provincial government to provide interim financing for maintaining and developing wildlife and fisheries habitat in Alberta.

The grant will pay for projects developed through the "Buck for Wildlife" program until funds are available from the sale of $1 resource development stamps which must be purchased with hunting and fishing licences.

SASKATOON (CP) — The working man needs more representation in university government, a spokesman for the Saskatchewan Federation of Labor told the Hall Commission hearings on university organization and structure.

In another brief Peter Russell, a student and former member of the university senate, board of governors and student council said there basically is nothing wrong with the university that cannot be resolved through periodic review.

SASKATOON (CP) — Representatives of a Rumanian tractor manufacturer are prepared to meet provincial officials Aug. 28 to further discuss a tractor assembly plant for Saskatoon.

If agreement can be rached, a plant costing $4 million and employing 150 to 200 persons could be approved.

EDMONTON (CP) — Homeowners who have applied for the education tax refund will begin getting cheques in the mail next week, says W. D. Isbister, deputy municipal affairs minister.

The cheques are to be accompanied by a memo from Municipal Affairs Minister Dave Russell explaining the refund is "possible by the additional revenues which resulted from your provincial government's new oil and gas policies."

The Alberta Property Tax Reduction Act allows a maximum rebate of $216.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Recipients of city welfare are to get an increase in the amount allotted to them to meet food bills.

City council decided to boost the welfare food payments by 15 per cent, effective next month.

For a recipient over 19 years of age, the welfare food payment will rise to $41 from $36.

The council decision came after a report that food costs in the city rose 19.3 per cent in the last year.

Gov't to Wait-See As Ferry Links Cut

The British Columbia government today adopted a wait-and-see attitude as B.C. Ferries was shut down by a walkout of 2,000 deck, catering and shore workers.

No negotiating meetings are scheduled with either the 2,000 unlicensed employees or the 400 licensed employees until at least Monday afternoon, said Transport Minister Robert Strachan.

Asked this morning what plans he has to deal with the walkout, Strachan said: "I'm going to examine the situation and determine what course of action will be taken."

He said no special cabinet meetings have been scheduled for today or this weekend. He had reported to Premier Barrett who "regretted it very much."

All ferry services between Vancouver Island and the Canadian mainland were halted by the B.C. ferries' strike and two smaller walkouts.

For the first time since July, 1958, no freight or passenger ferries were running between the Island and Vancouver area.

Struck are:

—B.C. Ferries, by 2,000 deck, catering and shore workers, members of the marine branch (unlicensed) of the B.C. Government Employees' Union. Issues include wages, wage adjustments and payment for statutory holiday work;

—Canadian Pacific Princess of Vancouver service between Nanaimo and Vancouver and Carrier Princess service between Swartz Bay and Vancouver, part of the 24-hour regional rotating strike against railways by B.C. non-operating employees — those who don't drive main-line locomotives or repair rolling stock. Issues are all terms for a new contract, but particularly wages and pensions;

—Aqua Transportation, a subsidiary of Seaspan International, by Local 400 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers. The company's Greg Yorke vessel hauls Canadian National rail cars to Victoria.

Thousands of tourists and others streamed to the Swartz Bay and Departure Bay terminals Thursday forming line-ups eight hours long trying to get off the Island before the expected strike.

Three extra sailings were laid on at Swartz Bay and all waiting traffic was cleared. But no extra sailings were arranged at Departure Bay, near Nanaimo, and 300 vehicles were left behind.

Today's strike against B.C. Ferries is the first since the government-owned fleet was shut for 14 days in February, 1968.

IT'S CHAOS ON WHARF

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Mainland-bound ferry passengers straggled off the Island today after 24-hour waits at as many as three different ferry terminals before passage was assured.

Spirits were still high, however, as books and playing cards were pulled out of car trunks to keep children and parents from becoming testy.

Tourists started their wait for passage on the Coho to Port Angeles and CPR's Princess Marguerite about 5 p.m. yesterday when the Swartz Bay situation was described as hopeless.

Roads leading to both Inner Harbor terminals were jammed with cars, and tourists hoped they were in the right line-up. Some described the situation as "chaotic."

But Victoria police had them sorted out about 5 a.m. and tired visitors were directed into neat lines along Wharf Street, in a supermarket parking lot at Esquimalt and Songhees and along Tyee Road.

Motel owners, disappointed at the mass exodus responding to the strike-bound B.C. Ferries, were granted one night's reprieve Thursday as

Greenpeace Man Beaten By French

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The Canadian protest yacht Greenpeace was boarded in international waters this week and its crew beaten by French sailors, according to Dr. Andrew McTaggart, brother of the boat's skipper David McTaggart who is in hospital in Papeete as a result of injuries received.

Reporting on a phone conversation with his brother McTaggart said:

"Dave was in international waters watching the balloon (signalling the imminent commencement of the nuclear test) go up, when he was boarded by the French military and beaten.

"He sustained internal injuries and an eye injury, and he doesn't know what's happened to the boat or the other members of the crew."

Dr. McTaggart said he neglected to ask his brother the precise date of the incident, but he gathered it must have occurred Monday or Tuesday within 20 miles of Mururoa.

The boat, sources in Tahiti said, was towed to Mururoa Lagoon where it will remain during the French nuclear tests now expected by the end of the week.

He was injured, according to a French spokesman, when he slipped on the deck of either the Greenpeace or the French naval vessel La Dunkirk Quoise during "a tussle."

The three other crewmen of Greenpeace were taken to a military airbase at Hoa Island.

An external affairs department spokesman said in Ottawa the incident first was drawn to the attention of the Canadian government Thursday when an embassy official in Paris was called to the French foreign ministry.

He apparently was told that the Canadian yacht was spotted inside the security zone that France had declared around the atoll at which the tests are being conducted.

2-Cent Gas Hike

Petroleum companies in B.C. this week began increasing gasoline and furnace oil prices from 1.5 cents to 2 cents per gallon.

Gulf Oil, Shell Canada, and Standard of British Columbia have increased their prices, while other companies say they are studying the market.

All companies are faced with higher costs because they are paying 1.14 cents more per gallon for the crude oil they buy.

Shell increased gasoline prices 2 cents per gallon and furnace oil by half a cent. The company has stopped free furnace servicing to enable them to hold down the furnace oil price.

In fact, the Gulf increases worked out to 1.6 cents in some instances, where franchise dealers increased prices from 53.9 regular to 55.5. Premium gasolines are exactly five cents per gallon higher.

Prices vary greatly across Victoria but prices for regular were from 55.5 to 56.9 in franchise stations that had increased their prices.

Large gas supermarkets, operated directly by petroleum companies, were selling gasoline from one to two cents per gallon cheaper.

Department stores and self-serve and discount stations were even lower, although their prices were also going up.

RAIL UNIONS CLOSE B.C.

Times News Services

The latest of a series of rotating strikes hampering the railways moved into B.C. today with non-operating rail employees declaring they would take a tougher stand this time round.

B.C. workers, who walked out at 6 a.m. for a 24-hour strike together with union members in Alberta and the Yukon said picket lines would be "rigid" at the port of Vancouver and at other locations.

Marshall Hill, chairman of the union's B.C. joint strike committee, said the pickets would not allow any trade union members through their lines, including longshoremen needed to load grain.

The shutdown to rail services in western and northern Canada marked the beginning of the fourth week of rotating strike action by the non-ops.

Also affected in B.C. are the CP ferry princesses, Vancouver and Carrier which will be tied up 24 hours.

An additional 18,000 Ontario rail workers east of Thunder Bay are expected to return to work at midnight tonight. Another 8,000 ended a three-day walkout Thursday afternoon in the Atlantic provinces.

Meanwhile union leaders of the 56,000 non-operating railway employees held a secret meeting with Labor Minister John Munro in Ottawa Thursday night.

A union spokesman said union leaders were in caucus and might meet later today with Judge Alan Gold, federal mediator in the dispute which has resulted in regional strike action against 11 railways since July 26.

U.S. Economy in Slump

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. economy cooled dramatically between April and June while prices rose at the highest rate in 22 years, the government said today.

In a revised report on the Gross National Product (GNP), the commerce department said the economy expanded at an annual rate of 2.4 per cent in the second quarter compared to 8.7 per cent in January-March.

The 2.4 per cent second quarter "real" growth rate (economic expansion minus the effects of inflation) was the smallest of any quarter since the recessionary 4.8 per cent decline in the last three months of 1970.

On the price side, the inflation rate was 7.3 per cent in the same period, up from a 6.1 per cent surge between January and March.

The second quarter inflationary surge was the biggest since a 13 per cent jump in the first quarter of 1951, when the buildup for the Korean War pushed inflation to record high.

In dollar terms, second quarter GNP rose $29.5 billion compared to $43.3 billion in the three previous months to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $1.3 trillion.

In another report, the commerce department said before-tax corporate profits in the second quarter rose $10.5 billion, compared to $13.5 billion in the January-March period. As of the end of June, pretax book profits were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $130.1 billion.

WEAVING HORSECART WAS DRIVER

DURHAM, England (UPI) — The horsecart that junk dealer Michael Archbold was driving was weaving down the road, and police said drink was involved.

Archbold Agreed, but said it wasn't him — it was the horse.

But magistrates fined him $12.50 Thursday under a 1000-year-old law and said Archbold had had a few too many — whatever the condition of his horse.

After the court session, Archbold owned up.

"Sparkie never touched a drop," he said. "I know it was a pretty bad excuse saying the horse was drunk and not me, but I'd had a few pints and it was all I could think of at the time."

Strike Alert

SANTIAGO (UPI) — Chile's airline pilots, physicians and retailers went on a "strike alert" today that threatened to turn the 23-day-old nationwide truckers walkout into a general strike.

Hospitals to End Sex Discrimination

Agreement has been reached between the Hospital Employees' Union and the provincial health department "to wipe out all sex discrimination in B.C. hospitals" by Jan. 1, 1976.

Cocke said the agreement provides an immediate wage increase of $37.50 per month, retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year, for all affected categories.

A timetable for bringing male and female rates of pay for similar jobs to the same level will be negotiated between the union and the B.C. Hospital Association. The agreement stipulates that this must be done by the start of 1976.

The Hospital Employees' Union has also agreed to stop processing cases of sex discrimination through its grievance procedures in the various hospitals.

The agreement also calls for provision of a job evaluation program, applying to new job descriptions and new training programs.

Cocke expressed his appreciation to Kathleen Ruff, director of the B.C. Human Rights Act "for the service she has rendered to women working in our hospitals."

He also praised the union, who he said "sacrificed some short-term gain to accomplish a great deal more important objective for a great many more people."

An Answer to Equality —The Washer and Dryer

* * *

Item: A call today from one of our town's most militant women liberationists, asking me belligerently why I'd not done an article on the emergence of that movement in Japan.

Fact is, I had to tell her, that while there's a small, vocal group of Japanese women seeking "equality" and "a North American status" for their sex, it remains the last of the developed nations in which women are content with a traditional role.

Since my last visit of 18 years ago I noticed a tremendous increase in the numbers of women in offices, particularly in the civil service where some even have executive jobs. But at the housewife level there's been very little change. Only the young marrieds go out to dinner or a show together. It's rare, indeed, to find a husband of five years' duration who doesn't lead his own social life, very often involving hanky-panky.

The explanation, like everything else in Japan, is to be found in affluence. It is only over the last 10 years that the average housewife has enjoyed the goodies of the Appliance Age, the washer and dryer, the dish-washer, the all-electric kitchen, not to mention a household budget that has made shopping a new-found joy.

Japanese women are today, I would guess, about where North American women were a quarter of a century ago. Only when the thrill of labor-saving devices and gadgets wears off will they start rocking the domestic boat.

* * *

Item: To making a date with the dentist today and I'm reminded again that there's no wider manifestation of the generation gap.

I am of that vintage that had good cause to fear and hate the chair and, in fact, go right back to "Painless" Parker who, single-handedly, must have caused more sheer agony to the human race than any other man. For at least 30 years I never had a dentist who didn't cause me a whole lot of naked pain, who didn't prefix his calisthenics with the warning that "This is going to hurt."

Ah, but my darlin' daughters have grown up with the high-speed drill, with "freezing" techniques that actually work and with dentists they look upon—incredibly!—as friends. And, of course, they are completely contemptuous of their old man's hang-ups, little knowing that it was the hang-up of an entire generation.

* * *

Item: An interesting post-script today to our notes on the subject of homosexuality in an article from The Medical Post noting the most recent views of the American Psychiatric Association members. Seems that what was once considered a crime or a disease—and now is considered neither—may no longer be classified as a "mental disorder."

The views of the association's vice-president, Dr. Judd Marmor, professor of psychiatry at the University of Southern California, indicate the depth of the re-examination that's now going on.

"Surely the time has come for psychiatry to give up the archaic practice of classifying the millions of men and women who accept or prefer homosexual object-choices as being, by virtue of that fact alone, mentally ill," he believes. "Psychiatrists do not have the right to so label behavior that is deviant from that currently favored by the majority."

A supporting view comes from Dr. Robert J. Stoller, a professor of psychiatry at the University of California in Los Angeles: "We cannot diagnose . . . homosexual behavior. There is too much variability in their styles of personality, and their reasons for seeking homosexual relations are too varied. Some homosexual syndromes, however, are beginning to be separated out, and in time we may be able to distinguish these clearly enough to have a dependable classification."

Such opinions fortify the only point I was trying to make in my own comment: That the layman must keep an open, tolerant mind, that ignorance and ridicule offer no solution to one of society's most pervasive problems.

Sweetener for the Sweet Life

"The real impact will be on those who don't live here and like to keep dashing over!"

Campbell said arrangements have been made to have a freight vehicle on the island and that islanders produce quite a bit of their own necessities.

* * *

He said the strike will rally community spirit:

"People with their own boats in the community will rally around and loan their boats to storekeepers.

Salt Spring Islander Marc Holmes quips:

Holmes agrees with Campbell that the respite from the heavy summer traffic could be enjoyable:

"Things have been booming here and, after all, we usually like to relax and go to sleep after Labor Day."

He says there are not too many people who commute from Salt Spring to Victoria for business and those wro do don't face too many problems because of the strike.

"It's a short run from Vesuvius to Crofton for a private boat," he says, "We also have flying services of a sort and there's also Mike Stacey's water taxi service."

One of the two commuters contacted saw the strike as an opportunity to test whether he can forsake the city life entirely.

"We have all the necessities here," he said, "We have chickens, our own garden, oysters, clams, turkeys, the occasional crab and the fishing is excellent.

"I'm conducting business by phone. It (the strike) will give me an opportunity to see if I can stand on my own two feet rather than rely on the city."

"As far as we are concerned, we have no problems," he said, "We're arranging for the water taxi to take us to and from work as of Monday. We've arranged a car pool here and I have my car over at Swartz Bay on the other side."

The only islander to admit the strike could give him a headache is Stacey, who's operated a water taxi service for 10 years.

"We'll have to play it by ear," he said, "We're going to go out of our mind. We can't handle the whole thing."

He said he will operate his 22-foot gas boat from Ganges as usual and transfer his 30-foot diesel craft to Fulford.

"The small boat will be able to zip-zap wherever it's needed. We're going to be very flexible. We're not going to set up any scheduled runs."

Stacey said he will ferry B.C. Hydro and mill workers, as well as Farmer Construction men working on the extension of the local school.

* * *

Stacey said that, as in the strike of February 1968, his water taxis will be carrying mail between the Gulf Islands and Vancouver Island.

He suggests that tourists caught on the island should relax and enjoy it.

"If men have to go back to work they don't have to take the whole family. The husband should go and Mom could stay on.

FIRE BAN ENDS

Campfire restrictions were removed from Vancouver Island today as rain showers eased the hazard of forest fires.

The B.C. Forest Service said there were no known blazes on the Island at this time.

The hazard has been considerably reduced by rain across the Island Thursday and this morning.

Forest industry operations may be resumed, although many of the camps are closed for vacations.

In the Nelson area, 10 persons who ignored a campfire ban have been charged. They face fines up to $500 if found guilty, although the usual penalty is in the range of $75 to $100 for the offence.

In addition, a man has been charged with arson in connection with a fire near Nelson. His name was not released.

The cost of fighting fires so far this year is $5.2 million, compared with $1.7 million at the same time in 1972.

Reason for the increased cost is greater use of the 42 planes available to drop water on forest blazes.

There has been a 50 per cent increase in the number of fires to date, 2,135 compared to 1,484 at the same time in 1972.

Housing Prices Peak

Resistance to 10 Per Cent Mortgage Grows

Housing prices have just about reached their peak for the year as resistance grows to 10 per cent mortgage rates, Greater Victoria Real Estate Board president Erik Charman said today.

Prices for expensive homes should remain at about their present levels while lower priced houses may record minor increases.

"The demand for homes is too high and there is some still very strong but the cost of borrowing money has gone resistance," he said.

"However, the great increases in house prices we have been experiencing couldn't possibly have been maintained in any case."

Victoria realtor D. F. Hanley agreed with Charman's assessment of the market, adding that he expected current prices to hold until the end of the year.

Hanley said a new upward surge of housing prices could be expected early in 1974 because the federal government would have to ease up on the money supply during the winter to combat unemployment.

Both blamed the 10 per cent mortgage rate and the cutback in the supply of funds as the main reason for the cooling off of the housing market.

Housing values, which had been stable for three years, began shooting upwards in November, 1972, and by May, 1973, had risen an average of 12 per cent in Victoria.

During that six-month period, some good homes in desirable locations had risen 30 per cent in value, while some others in less attractive areas had risen as little as 5 per cent.

By mid-August the upward movement of prices seemed to come to a virtual halt.

An official of Block Bros. said vendors were still listing their homes at higher prices but were no longer making instant sales at those prices.

He said a very strong resistance appeared to be growing against increased prices, although there was no sign of a decline.

The Greater Vancouver Real Estate Board reported the average home sale during July was $39,349, up more than $4,000 from the $35,141 at the end of June.

These statistics included all residential sales, including lots and duplexes, but excluding apartments and commercial property.

The board said that averages must always be treated cautiously because a few high-priced homes could distort the picture, but housing values were definitely rising strongly in July.

The Canadian board said the average selling price of all real estate in British Columbia during the first six months of 1973 was $29,545, up 18.3 per cent in six months.

This compares with a Canadian average of $30,000, up 14.7 per cent. The figures include lots, houses, and apartments.

During the six months, the average MLS price in Victoria rose to $29,950, up 20.4 per cent.

Vancouver's average rose 28.9 per cent to $38,562 and Toronto's average climbed 23.6 per cent to $41,264.

The Canadian Real Estate Association figures showed average MLS prices rising faster in the first quarter (13 per cent) than in the second quarter (3.5 per cent). House prices did not rise as quickly as lot prices, which are included in the figures.

Meanwhile, Central Mortgage and Housing, which makes money available for low-cost housing, has increased its rates to 9.5 per cent from 8.75 per cent, effective immediately.

Conventional mortgage rates in Victoria are 10 per cent, although in rare cases some 9.75 per cent mortgage money can be obtained.

Most of the nearly $540 million loaned by CMHC in 1972 went to low-rent units and homes for moderate income families.

Mom Bears Twins, Dad Goes to Jail

"This should have been a day of congratulations for you — a joyous day for a man and his wife, but now it is only one of pain," Judge William Ostler told Flett in Victoria provincial court.

Police said Flett entered the gas station with a slik stocking over his head and a .38-calibre revolver in his hand and demanded the attendant give him all the money in the till, a total of $35.

Ostler told Flett to change "the whole pattern of your life for the sake of your children and your wife.

"The future of your wife and children is in your hands."

On two charges of breach of probation, Flett was sentenced to three months in jail, to be served concurrently with the five-year sentence.

Witness Sought

A Victoria woman known only as "Mrs. English" is sought by the RCMP to aid investigation of a fatal highway crash near Williams Lake July 19.

The woman was witness to a sideswipe on Highway 97 in which one car continued for a mile before plunging into a ditch and rolling over, killing a male passenger.

Visitor Charged With Murder Bid

A Kingcome Inlet man has been released from jail on $8,000 bail after he was charged with the attempted murder of a Victoria city policeman and another man Thursday night.

Frank Joseph, also known as Frederick P. Vasquez, appeared in Victoria provincial court today and was remanded until Sept. 7 for a preliminary hearing.

Police said Larry Howard Caton, 1312 Government Street, was shot in the shoulder at 11:40 p.m., Thursday, outside the Century Inn beer parlor.

Three shots were fired at Caton, police said — the first missed, the second struck him in the right shoulder and the third missed, too.

Caton was rushed to Victoria General Hospital and later released.

Const. Kevin McLaughin, patrolling nearby, heard the three shots and ran towards the beer parlor.

A man turned a .38-calibre Smith and Wesson revolver towards the policeman and fired two shots. Both missed.

McLaughlin wrestled the man to the ground and kept him there by standing on his hair until police reinforcements arrived.

McLaughlin said in an interview that it was the first time in his three years on the police force that he had drawn his gun.

Police Subdue Man With Axe

Police said a middle-aged man with a logger's axe was taken into custody at 10 a.m. after he was wielding the weapon on a car lot on Yates Street.

William Arthur Conley appeared in Victoria provincial court later in the morning in connection with the incident, screaming that he was "a very excited and upset gentleman."

Conley was told by Judge William Ostler there was no reason for him to be upset, and Conley replied, 'What's good for the spider is bad for the fly."

Ostler remanded the case until later today so Conley could speak to a doctor.

Yelling that he wanted the whole world to hear and calling the judge names, Conley was led out of court.

Sewer Hearing 90% Favored

A View Royal petition requesting public hearing on the question of sewer expansion has been 90 per cent favorable, one of its organizers said today.

In a low-key campaign in which only genuinely interested persons were asked to respond, 57 households were canvassed and 73 persons signed in support of hearings.

John White, 309 View Royal, said the petition "probably reflects a majority opinion" indicating that a "significant and widely spread body of residents are aware of the profound effect the installation of major services could have."

He said they are anxious to be informed on all related matters, including cost, sharing arrangements, jurisdiction, planning and zoning before Capital Regional District decisions are made.

The petition was sent to Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer, and copies have gone to the premier, health minister, community associations, health and regional boards.

BOAT LEAPFROGS TRUCK

Two men were injured in Colwood Thursday afternoon when a boat they were towing leap-frogged their pickup truck after a collision with a runaway trailer.

Gerald Greenhall, of 1206 Old Esquimalt Road, the driver of the pick-up, and Bruce Lockhart, of 415 Raynor Ave., were taken to Victoria General Hospital.

Greenhall had chest and back injuries and Lockhart eye and face cuts.

Colwood RCMP said the accident occurred when a trailer broke loose from a flatbed truck being driven across Parson's Bridge by Gordon Truden, 571 Hallsor Drive.

The trailer veered into an abutment, and bounced on to the hood of the pickup truck towing the boat.

Gov't to Wait-See As Ferry Links Cut

The British Columbia government today adopted a wait-and-see attitude as B.C. Ferries was shut down by a walkout of deck, catering and shore workers.

No negotiating meetings are scheduled with either the 2,000 unlicensed employees or the 400 licensed employees until at least Monday afternoon, said Transport Minister Robert Strachan.

Asked this morning what plans he has to deal with the walkout, Strachan said: "I'm going to examine the situation and determine what course of action will be taken."

He said no special cabinet meetings have been scheduled for today or this weekend. He had reported to Premier Barrett who "regretted it very much."

All ferry services between Vancouver Island and the Canadian mainland were halted by the B.C. ferries' strike and two smaller walkouts.

For the first time since July, 1958, no freight or passenger ferries were running between the Island and Vancouver area.

Struck are:

—B.C. Ferries by members of the marine branch (unlicensed) of the B.C. Government Employees' Union. Issues include wages, wage adjustments and payment for statutory holiday work;

—Canadian Pacific Princess of Vancouver service between Nanaimo and Vancouver and Carrier Princess service between Swartz Bay and Vancouver, part of the 24-hour regional rotating strike against railways by B.C. non-operating employees — those who don't drive main-line locomotives or repair rolling stock. Issues are all terms for a new contract, but particularly wages and pensions;

—Aqua Transportation, a subsidiary of Seaspan International, by Local 400 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers. The company's Greg Yorke vessel hauls Canadian National rail cars to Victoria.

Thousands of tourists and others streamed to the Swartz Bay and Departure Bay terminals Thursday forming line-ups eight hours long trying to get off the Island before the expected strike.

Three extra sailings were laid on at Swartz Bay and all waiting traffic was cleared. But no extra sailings were arranged at Departure Bay, near Nanaimo, and 300 vehicles were left behind.

Today's strike against B.C. Ferries is the first since the government-owned fleet was shut for 14 days in February, 1968.

IT'S CHAOS ON WHARF

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Spirits were still high, however, as books and playing cards were pulled out of car trunks to keep children and parents from becoming testy.

Tourists started their wait for passage on the Coho to Port Angeles and CPR's Princess Marguerite about 5 p.m. Thursday when the Swartz Bay situation was described as hopeless.

Roads leading to both Inner Harbor terminals were jammed with cars, and tourists hoped they were in the right line-up. Some described the situation as "chaotic."

But Victoria police had them sorted out about 5 a.m. and tired visitors were directed into neat lines along Wharf Street, in a supermarket parking lot at Esquimalt and Songhees and along Tyee Road.

Motel owners, disappointed at the mass exodus responding to the strike-bound B.C. Ferries, were granted one night's reprieve Thursday as

Greenpeace Man Beaten By French

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The Canadian protest yacht Greenpeace was boarded in international waters this week and its crew beaten by French sailors, according to Dr. Andrew McTaggart, brother of the boat's skipper David McTaggart who is in hospital in Papeete as a result of injuries received.

Reporting on a phone conversation with his brother, McTaggart said:

"Dave was in international waters watching the balloon (signalling the imminent commencement of the nuclear test) go up, when he was boarded by the French military and beaten.

"He sustained internal injuries and an eye injury and he doesn't know what's happened to the boat or the other members of the crew."

McTaggart said he neglected to ask his brother the precise date of the incident, but he gathered it must have occurred Monday or Tuesday within 20 miles of Mururoa.

The boat, sources in Tahiti said, was towed to Mururoa Lagoon where it will remain during the French nuclear tests now expected by the end of the week.

He was injured, according to a French spokesman, when he slipped on the deck of either the Greenpeace or the French naval vessel La Dunkirk Quoise during "a tussle."

The three other crewmen of Greenpeace were taken to a military airbase at Hoa Island.

An external affairs department spokesman said in Ottawa the incident first was drawn to the attention of the Canadian government Thursday when an embassy official in Paris was called to the French foreign ministry.

He apparently was told that the Canadian yacht was spotted inside the security zone that France had declared around the atoll at which the tests are being conducted.

WEAVING HORSECART WAS DRIVER

DURHAM, England (UPI) — The horsecart that junk dealer Michael Archbold was driving was weaving down the road, and police said drink was involved.

Archbold agreed, but said it wasn't him — it was the horse.

But magistrates fined him $12.50 Thursday under a 1,000-year-old law and said Archbold had had a few too many — whatever the condition of his horse.

After the court session, Archbold owned up.

"Sparkie never touched a drop," he said. "I know it was a pretty bad excuse saying the horse was drunk and not me, but I'd had a few pints and it was all I could think of at the time."

2-Cent Gas Hike

Petroleum companies in B.C. this week began increasing gasoline and furnace oil prices from 1.5 cents to 2 cents per gallon.

Gulf Oil, Shell Canada, and Standard of British Columbia have increased their prices, while other companies say they are studying the market.

All companies are faced with higher costs because they are paying 1.14 cents more per gallon for the crude oil they buy.

Shell increased gasoline prices 2 cents per gallon and furnace oil by half a cent. The company has stopped free furnace servicing to enable them to hold down the furnace oil price.

In fact, the Gulf increases worked out to 1.6 cents in some instances, where franchise dealers increased prices from 53.9 regular to 55.5. Premium gasolines are exactly five cents per gallon higher.

Prices vary greatly across Victoria but prices for regular were from 55.5 to 56.9 in franchise stations that had increased their prices.

Large gas supermarkets, operated directly by petroleum companies, were selling gasoline from one to two cents per gallon cheaper.

Department stores and self-serve and discount stations were even lower, although their prices were also going up.

Strike Alert

RAIL UNIONS STRIKE B.C.

Times News Services

The latest of a series of rotating strikes hampering the railways moved into B.C. today with non-operating rail employees declaring they would take a tougher stand this time round.

B.C. workers, who walked out at 6 a.m. for a 24-hour strike together with union members in Alberta and the Yukon said picket lines would be "rigid" at the port of Vancouver and at other locations.

Marshall Hill, chairman of the union's B.C. joint strike committee, said the pickets would not allow any trade union members through their lines, including longshoremen needed to load grain.

The shutdown to rail services in western and northern Canada marked the beginning of the fourth week of rotating strike action by the non-ops.

Also affected in B.C. are the CP ferry princesses, Vancouver and Carrier which will be tied up 24 hours.

An additional 18,000 Ontario rail workers east of Thunder Bay are expected to return to work at midnight tonight.

U.S. Economy in Slump

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. economy cooled dramatically between April and June while prices rose at the highest rate in 22 years, the government said today.

In a revised report on the Gross National Product (GNP), the commerce department said the economy expanded at an annual rate of 2.4 per cent in the second quarter compared to 8.7 per cent in January-March.

The 2.4 per cent second quarter "real" growth rate (economic expansion minus the effects of inflation) was the smallest of any quarter since the recessionary 4.8 per cent decline in the last three months of 1970.

On the price side, the inflation rate was 7.3 per cent in the same period, up from a 6.1 per cent surge between January and March.

The second quarter inflationary surge was the biggest since a 13 per cent jump in the first quarter of 1951, when the buildup for the Korean War pushed inflation to record high.

In dollar terms, second quarter GNP rose $29.5 billion compared to $43.3 billion in the three previous months to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $1.3 trillion.

In another report, the commerce department said before-tax corporate profits in the second quarter rose $10.5 billion, compared to $13.5 billion in the January-March period. As of the end of June, pretax book profits were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $130.1 billion.

Hospitals to End Sex Discrimination

Agreement has been reached between the Hospital Employees' Union and the provincial health department "to wipe out all sex discrimination in B.C. hospitals" by Jan. 1, 1976.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said the agreement provides an immediate wage increase of $37.50 per month, retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year, for all affected categories.

A timetable for bringing male and female rates of pay for similar jobs to the same level will be negotiated between the union and the B.C. Hospital Association. The agreement stipulates that this must be done by the start of 1976.

The Hospital Employees' Union has also agreed to stop processing cases of sex discrimination through its grievance procedures in the various hospitals.

The agreement also calls for provision of a job evaluation program, applying to new job descriptions and new training programs.

Cocke expressed his appreciation to Kathleen Ruff, director of the B.C. Human Rights Act "for the service she has rendered to women working in our hospitals."

He also praised the union, which he said "sacrificed some short-term gain to accomplish a great deal more important objective for a great many more people."

CHICAGO (AP) — Prices for most agricultural commodity futures moved around wide upward and downward ranges on the Board of Trade Friday, but wheat futures prices closed strong.

Soybeans were mostly higher, but corn was lower and oats closed mixed.

Two days of limit declines in most products brought selling pressure left over from the previous session. Running counter to that influence was a commerce department report that 1.1 billion bushels of wheat and 1.1 billion bushels of corn already have been committed to exports.

Agriculture department figures places the export commitment much lower, but traders took this news as bullish also. It seemed to indicate the administration would be less likely to place export controls on wheat and corn.

Corn prices rose and fell in broad sweeps, finally closing a few cents lower than Thursday.

New York

Declining stocks held a slight lead over advances.

Alan C. Poole of Laidlaw Coggeshall Inc. said that while investors were remaining on the sidelines, "the market was receiving some support" as it nears its low for the year.

"We're in a critical testing area," said Poole, who predicted the market was near bottom and would rally soon, if only for the short-term.

Deere Co. was up 1¾ to $53½, as investors continued to remain bullish on the farm implement firm, reasoning that food shortages would necessitate more farm equipment.

Other volume leaders included Newhall Land and Farm, down ⅜ to $8, Travelodge International, up 3⅝ to $11⅛, and Colgate Palmolive, down one to $31.

Montreal

Gov't to Wait-See As Ferry Links Cut

The British Columbia government today adopted a wait-and-see attitude as B.C. Ferries was shut down by a walkout of deck, catering and shore workers.

No negotiating meetings are scheduled with either the 2,000 unlicensed employees or the 400 licensed employees until at least Monday afternoon, said Transport Minister Robert Strachan.

Asked this morning what plans he has to deal with the walkout, Strachan said: "I'm going to examine the situation and determine what course of action will be taken."

He said no special cabinet meetings have been scheduled for today or this weekend. He had reported to Premier Barrett who "regretted it very much."

All ferry services between Vancouver Island and the Canadian mainland were halted by the B.C. ferries' strike and two smaller walkouts.

For the first time since July, 1958, no freight or passenger ferries were running between the Island and Vancouver area.

Struck are:

—B.C. Ferries by members of the marine branch (unlicensed) of the B.C. Government Employees' Union. Issues include wages, wage adjustments and payment for statutory holiday work;

—Canadian Pacific Princess of Vancouver service between Nanaimo and Vancouver and Carrier Princess service between Swartz Bay and Vancouver, part of the 24-hour regional rotating strike against railways by B.C. non-operating employees — those who don't drive main-line locomotives or repair rolling stock. Issues are all terms for a new contract, but particularly wages and pensions;

—Aqua Transportation, a subsidiary of Seaspan International, by Local 400 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers. The company's Greg Yorke vessel hauls Canadian National rail cars to Victoria.

Thousands of tourists and others streamed to the Swartz Bay and Departure Bay terminals Thursday forming line-ups eight hours long trying to get off the Island before the expected strike.

Three extra sailings were laid on at Swartz Bay and all waiting traffic was cleared. But no extra sailings were arranged at Departure Bay, near Nanaimo, and 300 vehicles were left behind.

Today's strike against B.C. Ferries is the first since the government-owned fleet was shut for 14 days in February, 1968.

IT'S CHAOS ON WHARF

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Spirits were still high, however, as books and playing cards were pulled out of car trunks to keep children and parents from becoming testy.

Tourists started their wait for passage on the Coho to Port Angeles and CPR's Princess Marguerite about 5 p.m. Thursday when the Swartz Bay situation was described as hopeless.

Roads leading to both Inner Harbor terminals were jammed with cars, and tourists hoped they were in the right line-up. Some described the situation as "chaotic."

But Victoria police had them sorted out about 5 a.m. and tired visitors were directed into neat lines along Wharf Street, in a supermarket parking lot at Esquimalt and Songhees and along Tyee Road.

Motel owners, disappointed at the mass exodus responding to the strike-bound B.C. Ferries, were granted one night's reprieve Thursday as

Greenpeace Man Beaten By French

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The Canadian protest yacht Greenpeace was boarded in international waters this week and its crew beaten by French sailors, according to Dr. Andrew McTaggart, brother of the boat's skipper — David McTaggart who is in hospital in Papeete as a result of injuries received.

Reporting on a phone conversation with his brother, McTaggart said:

"Dave was in international waters watching the balloon (signalling the imminent commencement of the nuclear test) go up, when he was boarded by the French military and beaten.

"He sustained internal injuries and an eye injury and he doesn't know what's happened to the boat or the other members of the crew."

McTaggart said he neglected to ask his brother the precise date of the incident, but he gathered it must have occurred Monday or Tuesday within 20 miles of Mururoa.

The boat, sources in Tahiti said, was towed to Mururoa Lagoon where it will remain during the French nuclear tests now expected by the end of the week.

He was injured, according to a French spokesman, when he slipped on the deck of either the Greenpeace or the French naval vessel La Dunkirk Quoise during "a tussle."

The three other crewmen of Greenpeace were taken to a military airbase at Hoa Island.

An external affairs department spokesman said in Ottawa the incident first was drawn to the attention of the Canadian government Thursday when an embassy official in Paris was called to the French foreign ministry.

He apparently was told that the Canadian yacht was spotted inside the security zone that France had declared around the atoll at which the tests are being conducted.

2-Cent Gas Hike

Petroleum companies in B.C. this week began increasing gasoline and furnace oil prices from 1.5 cents to 2 cents per gallon.

Gulf Oil, Shell Canada, and Standard of British Columbia have increased their prices, while other companies say they are studying the market.

All companies are faced with higher costs because they are paying 1.14 cents more per gallon for the crude oil they buy.

Shell increased gasoline prices 2 cents per gallon and furnace oil by half a cent. The company has stopped free furnace servicing to enable them to hold down the furnace oil price.

In fact, the Gulf increases worked out to 1.6 cents in some instances, where franchise dealers increased prices from 53.9 regular to 55.5. Premium gasolines are exactly five cents per gallon higher.

Prices vary greatly across Victoria but prices for regular were from 55.5 to 56.9 in franchise stations that had increased their prices.

Large gas supermarkets, operated directly by petroleum companies, were selling gasoline from one to two cents per gallon cheaper.

Department stores and self-serve and discount stations were even lower, although their prices were also going up.

Strike Alert

SANTIAGO (UPI) — Chile's airline pilots, physicians and retailers went on a "strike alert" today that threatened to turn the 23-day-old nationwide truckers walkout into a general strike.

RAIL UNIONS STRIKE B.C.

Times News Services

The latest of a series of rotating strikes hampering the railways moved into B.C. today with non-operating rail employees declaring they would take a tougher stand this time round.

B.C. workers, who walked out at 6 a.m. for a 24-hour strike together with union members in Alberta and the Yukon said picket lines would be "rigid" at the port of Vancouver and at other locations.

Marshall Hill, chairman of the union's B.C. joint strike committee, said the pickets would not allow any trade union members through their lines, including longshoremen needed to load grain.

The shutdown to rail services in western and northern Canada marked the beginning of the fourth week of rotating strike action by the non-ops.

Also affected in B.C. are the CP ferry princesses, Vancouver and Carrier which will be tied up 24 hours.

An additional 18,000 Ontario rail workers east of Thunder Bay are expected to return to work at midnight tonight.

U.S. Economy in Slump

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. economy cooled dramatically between April and June while prices rose at the highest rate in 22 years, the government said today.

In a revised report on the Gross National Product (GNP), the commerce department said the economy expanded at an annual rate of 2.4 per cent in the second quarter compared to 8.7 per cent in January-March.

The 2.4 per cent second quarter "real" growth rate (economic expansion minus the effects of inflation) was the smallest of any quarter since the recessionary 4.8 per cent decline in the last three months of 1970.

On the price side, the inflation rate was 7.3 per cent in the same period, up from a 6.1 per cent surge between January and March.

The second quarter inflationary surge was the biggest since a 13 per cent jump in the first quarter of 1951, when the buildup for the Korean War pushed inflation to record high.

In dollar terms, second quarter GNP rose $29.5 billion compared to $43.3 billion in the three previous months to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $1.3 trillion.

In another report, the commerce department said before-tax corporate profits in the second quarter rose $10.5 billion, compared to $13.5 billion in the January-March period. As of the end of June, pretax book profits were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $130.1 billion.

WEAVING HORSECART WAS DRIVER

DURHAM, England (UPI) — The horsecart that junk dealer Michael Archbold was driving was weaving down the road, and police said drink was involved.

Archbold agreed, but said it wasn't him — it was the horse.

But magistrates fined him $12.50 Thursday under a 1,000-year-old law and said Archbold had had a few too many — whatever the condition of his horse.

After the court session, Archbold owned up.

"Sparkie never touched a drop," he said. "I know it was a pretty bad excuse saying the horse was drunk and not me, but I'd had a few pints and it was all I could think of at the time."

Hospitals to End Sex Discrimination

Agreement has been reached between the Hospital Employees' Union and the provincial health department "to wipe out all sex discrimination in B.C. hospitals" by Jan. 1, 1976.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said the agreement provides an immediate wage increase of $37.50 per month, retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year, for all affected categories.

A timetable for bringing male and female rates of pay for similar jobs to the same level will be negotiated between the union and the B.C. Hospital Association. The agreement stipulates that this must be done by the start of 1976.

The Hospital Employees' Union has also agreed to stop processing cases of sex discrimination through its grievance procedures in the various hospitals.

The agreement also calls for provision of a job evaluation program, applying to new job descriptions and new training programs.

Cocke expressed his appreciation to Kathleen Ruff, director of the B.C. Human Rights Act "for the service she has rendered to women working in our hospitals."

He also praised the union, which he said "sacrificed some short-term gain to accomplish a great deal more important objective for a great many more people."

The only remaining ferry services off the Island are Washington State Ferries, Sidney to Anacortes; Black Ball, Victoria to Port Angeles; and Canadian Pacific's Princess Marguerite Victoria to Seattle. There was a heavy demand on all three companies.

Washington state today added a third run to the Washington State Ferries service between Sidney and Anacortes until further notice.

The super-ferry Walla Walla, which handles 2,000 passengers and 206 cars, will leave Anacortes at midnight and leave Sidney at 3 a.m.

Major airlines flying between the mainland and Victoria are booked until Tuesday and no extra flights are planned.

Spokesmen for Pacific Western Airlines and Air Canada said today they were swamped with requests for extra flights. Passengers have been advised to stay home or to come to the airport and take their chances on no-shows in emergency situations.

PWA add two extra flights today and both had been filled before 10 a.m. today.

Air West, flying from Victoria's Inner Harbor to downtown Vancouver is also booked until Tuesday but an air-bus system will operate on a first-come-first-serve basis all day Saturday.

"We don't have spare equipment knocking around," said a Vancouver PWA spokesman, "and we're not anticipating any additional flights at the present time."

"We're sort of reviewing the demand on an hour-to-hour basis," he said, adding there's "not too much we can do."

The current Canadian Pacific mechanics' strike and the CP rail strike have added to the shortage of aircraft and crews, said the spokesman.

Food supplies in Victoria will not be immediately or seriously affectd by B.C. Ferry workers strike.

Retail and wholesale suppliers in the city said today most produce is transported by CPR carrier ferries and the B.C. Ferry strike is just "one more hassle" to add to the series on rotating CPR and CN rail strikes.

While Safeway stores normally use B.C. Ferries a great deal, a company spokesman said today the strike will cause no crisis.

Essentials such as bread, milk and eggs can be supplied from the Island he said, and Safeway recieves much of its produce from the United States.

"We got all our truckloads back from Vancouver last night," the spokesman said, "and we're getting ready to start getting those essentials locally."

Certan products, he admits however, will start disappearing from the shelves if the strike continues next week.

Woodward's food department uses the CPR carrier ferry almost exclusively and forecasts no major problems despite the troubles caused by the 24-hour rotating strike which hit the CPR ferry today.

Many of the food suppliers have been dealing with strike problems for several weeks as the rotating CPR and CN rail strikes back up freight cars across Canada.

"I've got four or five rail cars held up on their way from the prairies now," said a spokesman for a large wholesale company.

"With the B.C. Ferries out as well," he said, "it will just cause more delays on the CPR ferry."

Another major food wholesaler said his warehouse normally stocks less than four weeks' supplies. Those stocks have already been cut into by the rail strikes and if the B.C. Ferries stay on strike some products will no longer be available.

Feed grain suppliers said today they are also more affected by the CPR strikes and some report they are already behind on their feed orders.

One spokesman for a local firm said he usually brings his hay supplies by B.C. Ferries and his customers will not have their orders filled.

"It's going to affect a lot of people," he said.

Other feed stores said as long as the CPR carrier ferry goes back in service they can continue supplying feed although other merchandise will be affected by the B.C. Ferry strike.

The last total shutdown of Island-Canadian mainland ferry services in 1958 lasted four days. During the 14-day strike by B.C. Ferries in 1968, CPR service continued between Nanaimo and Vancouver.

The unlicensed staff of B.C. Ferries met early this morning after negotiations Thursday afternoon and evening with Transport Minister Rob*ert Strachan failed to resolve* the issues.

Between 92 and 93 per cent of the employees voted to stop work, said Norman Thornber, business agent for the marine branch (unlicensed) of the BCGEU.

Swartz Bay workers voted 94 per cent in favor, while Departure Bay was 100 per cent in favor. A joint meeting of unlicensed staff at Horseshoe Bay and Tsawwassen terminals and the Deas Dock saw only 23 of more than 700 op*pose a work stoppage.*

The licensed personnel — 400 deck officers and enneers, members of a separate marine branch of the BCGEU — will hold meetings tonight to decide what they want to do.

Strachan today attributed the major problem in the breakdown of negotiations to an internal split between the two groups of ferry employees.

He said the decision of the unlicensed employees to bar*gain separately from* the licensed employees resulted in an impossible bargaining situation for the government.

"This division among the ferry employees is one of the factors that have made a settlement almost impossible," he said.

But he was happy to hear the two groups now are willing to bargain jointly again.

In Kelowna Liberal leader David Anderson today urged the NDP government to intervene in the B.C. Ferries dispute and order ferries person*nel back to work before a* "critical" situation develops.

He also said Premier Barrett should replace Transport Minister Strachan because Strachan had handled the negotiations incompetently.

Speaking as one of the two Victoria MLAs, Anderson said it would be "intolerable" for the city and Island to face a lengthy strike on the ferry services.

"We only make money on the tourist trade and all our supplies have to come by ferry. The peasantry who don't have the benefit of gov*ernment jet aircraft have* to use the ferries," he added.

Anderson said government intervention in the dispute should come as early as next Monday, if no settlement appears in sight over the weekend.

*If necessary the B.C. Legis*lature should be reconvened before Sept. 13 to deal with the B.C. Ferries dispute as a matter of "grave urgency," Saanich-The Islands MLA Hugh Curtis said today.

Curtis, speaking both as Progressive Conservative MLA and Mayor of Saanich, said: "I think all of us are relutant to do that but the action is probably warranted."

The annual convention of the Agricultural Institute of Canada will go ahead despite the B.C. Ferries strike, an organizer said today.

But how many people will turn up for the five-day meeting here, which starts Sunday, organizers just don't know.

More than 1,200 people had been expected to attend, Kathleen Ellis of the institute's central office in Ottawa, said today.

"We've had quite a few calls from people on the mainland wondering if it's still going on and how to get here," said Ellis.

She said delegates arriving in cars will probably be directed south from Vancouver to catch a ferry to Victoria from Anacortes, Seattle or Port Angeles.

"If you've got anyone with a private airplane, we sure could use it," said Bill Pearson, Oak Bay fire chief.

Several other conventions underway in the city, such as the Optimists of the Pacific Northwest who are at the Empress Hotel, are continuing undisrupted by the ferry strike."

Strachan said he has issued instructions to help stranded motorists at Departure Bay "in every possible way."

He had no information at present on what effects the ferry strike will cause to Van*couver Island food supplies,* but it is "one of the things I'll have to consider."

Licensed ferry branch spokesman Peter Marshall said the officers won't sail without their own crews "and therefore vessels can't sail with makeshift crews." Picket lines would be respected, but none have been established.

While the issues which precipitated the walkout are "bread-and-butter ones," both Marshall and Thornber said there is support for establishing the ferries as a separate marine operation, apart from the civil service, although this hasn't been a topic in negotiations.

Thornber said the "key" to the whole dispute is that the Civil Service Commission and the government are "very reluctant" to recognize the ferry fleet as a marine operation.

Marshall said there is "some feeling along those lines" — for a crown corpora*tion for the ferries* — but it "really hasn't been raised as an issue. It's an approach they could use. It hasn't been put to Strachan, to make this a crown corporation."

Strachan acknowledged today the government has not considered establishing ferry employees as a bargaining unit separate from the rest of the civil service.

Such a move, he said, would require legislative action "and that's not my department."

*Thursday night, the indica*tions were that the walkout could be a long one.

Strachan said after one session with the unlicensed representatives "if there is a strike, it could be a long one. It probably will be."

Later, spokesmen for the ferry workers agreed, saying employees are "adamant, they want a satisfactory settlement."

WHARF STREET CHAOS

There were 600 cars in the Blackball line-ups, each tagged with a pink card indicating a reservation on vessels sailing at 6:30 and 11 a.m., 3:30, 7:30 and 11 p.m.

The Marguerite was also completely booked about noon.

"It's just one of those crisis things, where everyone is liking the excitement in a desperate kind of way," said visitor Susan Pratt from Boulder, Colorado.

Scheduled to go on the 11 a.m. Coho, she came just in time to miss the last ferry.

"We're taking advantage of a new experience," said Mr. and Mrs. Jim Forrest from Prince Albert, Sask.

"For once we're in a solid line-up and know actually, that we'll get off the Island. It's a nice feeling," said Forrest explaining they arrived in Nanaimo yesterday, decided to turn around and go back because of the strike, but failed.

"We waited in line there for a while, and then decided to beat it down to Swartz Bay, but it was booked so we arrived here about 5 p.m. yesterday.

They slept in the car, saw little of Victoria, a great deal of Wharf Street, but were still smiling.

Robbie Frankel was disap*pointed he lost his place in the* line-up "during the chaos" Thursday evening, but he too was smiling, assured of a reservation at 3 p.m.

A resident of Casper, Calif., he described the ferry situation as "really crazy" but said he wouldn't hesitate to come back. "The city's really beautiful."

Sidney residents were up all night preparing doughnuts. coffee and sandwiches for tourists caught in 1½-mile line-up from Washington State Ferries terminal to McTavish Road.

Civil defence officials brought in emergency supplies of food, blankets and portable toilet facilities for people who began lining up late Thursday night and early today.

The Sancha committee has offered to open Sancha Hall for people needing overnight *accommodation if the situa*tion becomes critical.

There were no extra runs from Nanaimo and about 300 vehicles stayed overnight hoping there would be no strike.

Swartz Bay put on three extra sailings and all vehicles were cleared with only 30 cars on the last run.

ONE WAY TO LEAVE ISLAND

Times News Services

NANAIMO — Stuck on Vancouver Island by the ferry strike? Fred Maquire of Nanaimo has found a way out.

He is floating to the mainland in a bathtub today.

Undaunted by his last-place finish in the Nanaimo-to-Vancouver bathtub derby July 22, Maquire set out this morning *on a one-man, 180-mile mara*thon float to Seattle.

HE WAS BURIED ALIVE

Frank Kawa was in a service ditch at a housing subdivision when the side of the trench slipped on to him.

Nearby workmen heard his muffled yell and were able to free his head within minutes.

He was pulled from the ditch by firemen after 90 minutes and released from hospital after an examination.

CHICAGO (AP) — Prices for most agricultural commodity futures moved around wide upward and downward ranges on the Board of Trade Friday, but wheat futures prices closed strong.

Soybeans were mostly higher, but corn was lower and oats closed mixed.

Two days of limit declines in most products brought selling pressure left over from the previous session. Running counter to that influence was a commerce department report that 1.1 billion bushels of wheat and 1.1 billion bushels of corn already have been committed to exports.

Agriculture department figures places the export commitment much lower, but traders took this news as bullish also. It seemed to indicate the administration would be less likely to place export controls on wheat and corn.

Prices Decline In Toronto Trading

Volume by 2 p.m. was 1.63 million shares compared with 1.33 million at the same time Thursday.

Industrial mining, merchandising, pipeline and chemical stocks were among declining market sub-groups while bank, beverage, food processing and oil refining issues were higher.

Trading was resumed in Canadian Manoir Industries Ltd. after a morning halt, pending the disclosure that the company has bought W. H. Olsen Manufacturing Co. Ltd. The stock was off 15 cents to $3.75.

Falconbridge Nickel fell 1½ to $77½, Crows Nest Industries 1 to $30, Alcan ¾ to $32¼ and Standard Broadcasting ¾ to $10.

Rothmans rose 1¾ to $15, Life Investors 75 cents to $3, Massey-Ferguson ⅜ to $23, Imperial Oil ¼ to $41⅝ and Distillers Corp.-Seagrams ½ to $41.

United Siscoe Mines gained 60 cents to $5.80, Placer ½ to $28¾ and Brunswick 20 cents to $5. Pine Point lost ⅞ to $34 ¾ and Mindamar 40 cents to $5.

New York

Declining stocks held a slight lead over advances.

Alan C. Poole of Laidlaw Coggeshall Inc. said that while investors were remaining on the sidelines, "the market was receiving some support" as it nears its low for the year.

"We're in a critical testing area," said Poole, who predicted the market was near bottom and would rally soon, if only for the short-term.

Deere Co. was up 1¾ to $53½, as investors continued to remain bullish on the farm implement firm, reasoning that food shortages would necessitate more farm equipment.

Other volume leaders included Newhall Land and Farm, down ⅜ to $8, Travelodge International, up 3⅝ to $11⅛, and Colgate Palmolive, down one to $31.

Montreal

Combined volume on the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges at 1 p.m. was 440,100 shares, compared with 500,900 shares at the same time Thursday.

MICC Investments gained 2⅞ to $29⅜, Dominion Bridge ½ to $38 and Consolidated Bathurst ½ to $25 while Rio Algom Mines dropped ½ to $28½ and Pan Ocean Oil ¼ to $15⅜.

'Silent Service' Survives Politics

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

There's still a "silent service" in Canada even though political manipulation at the highest level has taken away our navy in favor of a "sea element."

As a matter of fact, the incident was spilled by an officer cadet who's not been around long enough to really understand the tight-lipped tradition of our tars.

It was Wednesday night when west-sou'westerlies of 35 knots had caused chaos in Cadboro Bay, where only the sturdy Cal 20s and some daredevil Laser skippers had managed to complete series racing with the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

The Oriole was in Haro Strait, doing some night sailing in the vicinity of Turn Point.

She was hailed by an Erickson 23 from Oregon with five people aboard — a man and his wife, two teenage daughters and a six-year-old son.

My informant tells me, "It was kind of windy at the time and there were bad swells."

"We came about under sail, then downed sail and came alongside the boat," the cadet reports.

The Oregon skipper admitted he was completely lost and the Oriole took the craft under tow, bringing her safely in to the RVYC base at Cadboro Bay about midnight.

Two RVYC juniors will be trying to pull off a big one this weekend.

Skipper Tim Roots and Jeff McBride will be competing in the western 16-and-under-championships on Glenmore Lake in Calgary. The seven race series will be sailed in Flying Juniors.

There'll be a total of 10 cerws bidding for top spot. Three are from British Colulmbia, three from Alberta, two from Saskatchewan and two from Manitoba.

At Cadboro Bay, RVYC boats will race another in the around-Discovery-Island series on Saturday with the first boats getting their start gun at 1 p.m. The race will be run on a reverse handicap system.

On Sunday, keel boats of the club will compete in a 26-miler acorss the Strait of Juan de Fuca to the U.S. navy buoy and back. Start time is 10 a.m. in the Gonzales area.

Boats have to be equipped for Catergory 11 offshore racing. There will be two classes — International Offshore Rule and Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet.

The end of the Fastnet race — longest of the four races for the coveted Admiral's Cup — was a bit of a heart break this week for those aboard the top United States challenger Charisma.

While she lay in irons, the Brazilian boat Saga kept moving, making up an estimated 20 miles during the night to overhaul the Amerlean boat and become first America's Cup contender over the finish line of the 605-mile classic.

Sorcery, a U.S. 61-footer was first boat home in the Fastnet but she was not an Admiral's Cup contender because she exceeds the 60-foot limit set by the Cup organizers.

A total of 48 Admiral's Cup competitors were in the Fastnet, plus another 250 that couldn't meet Cup requirements.

The Cup race committee announced today that West Germany had won the Admiral's Cup with a total of 831 points, followed by Australia with 779 points. Britain was in third spot with 752 points, beating out the United States with 738.
